$350,000 OIL BRIBE LAID TO BONFILS

(Copyright 1935)

Washington, Oct. 21—A sensational revelation involving the use of a large sum of money by an official of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey to influence the editorial policy of the late Frederick G. Bonfils, as publisher and editor of the Denver Post, will be disclosed at hearings before the Federal Trade Commission within the next ten days.

According to the reports of the Federal Trade Commission investigators, an official of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has admitted payment of $350,000 to Bonfils in 1927.

The money which a Standard Oil official says was sent to Bonfils by a special messenger on October 27, 1927, was for the purpose, it is said, of discontinuing the unfavorable attitude of the Post toward passage of a gas rate ordinance in the City of Denver.

The voucher for the $350,000 was furnished by an official of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, who was an officer of one of its partly owned subsidiaries, the Colorado Interstate Gas Company.

Officials of the Federal Trade Commission hearing today declined to discuss the subject of the inquiry beyond stating that a public hearing in the commission's investigation of the Colorado Interstate Gas Company will be held on Tuesday, October 29.

BARED OF PROBE

Fire Perils Center of Salem

Salem, Oct. 21—A small boy playing with matches started a fire at Crombie and Essex streets today in the heart of the business and tenement section, which for a time threatened to become general.

Remembering the Salem fire of years ago, the fire department turned in a general alarm, bringing every available apparatus to the scene.

Mary Christopher, 19, awakened her brother Christopher, 23, who was sleeping in a Crombie street house and they managed to escape from their second-floor apartment just before the flames filled the rooms.

Three tenements were ablaze at the height of the flames, those at 13 and 17 Crombie streets, and one at 15 Norman street.

Chester L. Twist, who lives on the ground floor of the Norman street address, had been hurt when his auto hit a trolley car 15 minutes before the fire was discovered, and was in Salem Hospital in serious condition.

Mrs. Henry Parsons, also of the Norman street house, was rescued by Patrick Flynn, former Salem patrolman.

Mrs. George Hall, 23, discovered the fire and turned in the alarm, at the same time rescuing her year-old baby.

Fire Chief Joseph H. Flynn said that a child about four years of age was seen playing with matches near the rubbish barrels at the rear of the Crombie street house, which first started to burn.

Damage mounted to $14,000.

Miss Nichols was removed to the Samaritan Hospital where her condition was described as serious.

"We do not know the full extent of her injuries," a hospital attendant said. "She is in the operating room. She is quite badly injured, and also suffered severe burns."

Miss Nichols' pilot, Captain Harry Hublitch of New York, also was seriously injured.

The other four apparently escaped with minor injuries. They are:

AFIRE IN THE AIR

It was the third crash for the record-breaking airwoman from Rye, N. Y. She leaped from her burning ship in Louisville, Ky., once and cracked up on the take-off for a transocean flight at St. John, N. B., in 1931.

Miss Nichols and her five employes have been in Troy for more than a week making flights with passengers, and giving 10 per cent of the proceeds to local charities.

FIRST HIT AN ELM

Elbert Turner, 50, a farmer, said he heard "a terrific crack like a bolt of lightning," as the plane hit a tall elm tree 50 feet from the house.

"There was another crash an instant later, then a great roar of flames," he said.

"I ran out of the house. The plane was in my vegetable garden, and fire was leaping 30 feet high.

"The elm tree was broken, and there were shreds of tattered canvas hanging from it.

"After hitting the elm, the plane had broken down a tall maple.

"There was a woman lying under the elm. A little farther on, and closer to the plane, was a man. I don't remember seeing anybody else."

Aboard the U. S. S. Houston en route to the United States, Oct. 21—President Roosevelt today closely watched weather reports of a hurrican trailing the Houston out of the Caribbean Sea as this ship sped along the eastern fringe of the Bahama Islands.

Previous plans to stop today off Crooked Island were cancelled to await the latest reports of the tropical disturbance.

The effects of the gale were felt as the Houston and the Portland encountered rough seas, high winds and severe squalls traveling through the windward passage, between Cuba and Haiti.

Despite the storm warnings, the weather is clear today although waves pound the cruisers, moving northward at 21 knots.

ROOSEVELT AIDES SEEK CURLEY AS SENATE HOPE

ATTEMPT TO HOLD STATE FOR ADMINISTRATION

By ALAN C. FRAZER

(Copyright, 1932, by Boston Evening American)

In a major effort to keep Massachusetts in the Roosevelt column next fall, aides of the President have prepared a plan on which they are ready to place their hopes, and which they will shortly put up to Governor Curley, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The administration's plan envisions Governor Curley and State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley at the top of the State ticket, one as candidate for United States senator and the other for governor.

It would be left to Governor Curley to say whether he would offer himself for re-election or would enter the lists for the senatorial toga now worn by Marcus A. Coolidge of Fitchburg.

Sponsorship of Hurley is, of course, intended to entice ex-Governor Joseph B. Ely and other recalcitrants into the fold.

GOVERNOR UNDECIDED

Governor Curley's view of such a proposition is debatable. There are many political angles to be considered, including the public's reaction here to the "raw deal." It is understood that even in his own mind he has not made his choice, whether to run for senator or for a second term on Beacon Hill.

His stand on the potential candidacy of State Treasurer Hurley is also problematical.

While Charles F. Hurley is one of the leading figures in the Democratic party in this state, others have been coming to the fore as possibilities for high political place, including one of his own name, Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River, who, as lieutenant-governor, has a claim to advancement.

It would seem that the Cambridge Hurley might stand aside for his Fall River namesake's advancement to the governorship, but in a contest for the Senate, the shoe would be on the other foot.

SEVERE TEST DUE

That the Roosevelt forces are facing a severe test here is admitted on all sides.

Governor Curley's friends feel that both he, personally, and this state have been slighted, in spite of his ardent support of Franklin D. Roosevelt for the nomination in 1932.

Former Governor Ely is openly and vigorously critical of the administration's policies. Senator David I. Walsh has fallen out at times and was opposed to Roosevelt for the nomination. The administration might find various congressmen lukewarm at election time, if Massachusetts is not treated better on relief, patronage and other matters.

Political considerations are coming sharply to the fore, with the approach of 1936, and in an effort to repair broken fences, advances have already been made to the Massachusetts governor, as the key to success in this state.

Submission of the plan for the top of the state ticket is a move in the same direction.

PERSONAL PROBLEM

Governor Curley is, however, apt to make his decision independently of administration pressure or coaxing. He has a difficult personal problem ahead of him, the correct solution of which depends largely on his guess as to the outcome of the Republican primaries.

Political observers believe he could defeat Coolidge for the senatorial nomination and that in the election he could reasonably expect victory, whether his opponent is the youthful Henry Cabot Lodge, Mayor Sinclair Weeks of Newton or any other among those named up to this date as aspirants for the Republican nomination.

On the other hand, re-election as governor would be a reasonable expectation against Leverett Saltonstall, who is believed due to receive the Republican machine support. Aside from Saltonstall, the vote-getting ability of former Attorney-General Joseph E. Warner, and the personal popularity of former State Treasurer John W. Haigis of Greenfield, both avowed candidates, must be considered.

PET PROJECTS

Moreover, the governor has unfinished projects before him in the State House, especially his work-and-wages program, which he would like to see through to completion. He has a number of pet projects which remain unrealized.

Should he run for senator he would like to feel sure that a Democrat was going to succeed him.

Should he not run for senator next year, the field would be closed for him until 1940, in which case he would be out of action after 1938, unless he successfully sought a third term in the gubernatorial chair. He would perhaps prefer a new field for his energies rather than three successive terms at the helm of the state.

Facts

Washington, Oct. 31 (US) —The Roosevelt administration has gone in for the biggest clerical task in the history of the American government.

It is going to make an alphabetical list of all the men and women in the United States who were disfranchised by the census enumerators in 1900.

These men and women will be listed by alphabet, then by geographical units, then by families.

The idea is to ascertain how many might be available for an old-age pension.

12 ESCAPE FIRE IN DORCHESTER

Twelve persons narrowly escaped death or injury in a two-alarm fire that partly destroyed a frame dwelling at 571 Norfolk street, Dorchester today.

Aroused by crackling flames, Mrs. Clara Charient, second-floor tenant, sent her sons, Max and Nathan, to awaken others on the third floor. She went to the first floor and notified Mrs. Rose Green, owner of the property.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Neckles, their daughter Sally, 24, and son David 20, and a married daughter, Mrs. Fay Korotzen, third-floor tenants, fled to the street with Max and Nathan Charient.

Flames burned through the roof, as other first-floor tenants, Mrs. Alice Gordon and her son Martin, 15, escaped unaided. Fire swept the third-floor rear apartment, Edward Dronsick, last in the building, escaped.

The roof and most of the third floor were destroyed, with loss estimated at $5000. Cause of the fire was undetermined.

BOOST IN TAXES, COMING SOON

By International News Service

Washington, Oct. 21—Heavy income taxation on the "little fellow" and a general manufacturers' sales tax were foreseen today by congressional tax experts if huge government deficits continue.

The analysis of tax revenue sources by experts was prompted by Treasury statements, indicating the possibility that tax receipts in the present fiscal year will fall below estimates.

Although Congress has always refused to impose taxes in a campaign year, the issue of a broader income tax base and heavier taxes on persons making from $1000 to $6000 a year and general excise taxes must be considered, the experts say.

London, Oct. 21—Arthur Henderson, who gave his health to the cause of peace and opposed League of Nations sanctions against Italy, lay dead today without having learned of fighting in Ethiopia and that the League was technically at war with Italy.

As the 72-year-old labor leader, president of the disarmament conference, and Nobel peace prize winner, lay on his death bed, newspapers were kept from him for six weeks.

His wife and daughter and two sons—a third son was killed on the Somme—kept news of the Ethiopian war from him. Widespread mourning followed his death.

Anyone Who Can Think Can Write

The following letter was written by William Randolph Hearst in reply to questions submitted to him by Paul Mallon, Washington correspondent of the North American Newspaper Alliance. Mr. Hearst's letter was published throughout the nation by clients of the NANA.

Copyright, 1932, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

San Simeon, Calif.

My Dear Mr. Mallon:

You asked me if I write all the articles I sign.

That, sir, is not a very complimentary question.

Would it be discourteous for me to ask in return if you write all the articles you sign?

Of course you do and of course you do not think that you are so much cleverer than other people that you can write and others can not.

I am a professional newspaper man, Mr. Mallon, and I have been working at the newspaper business—not playing with it, but working at it—day and night for over fifty years.

Would I not be a "dumb cluck," as the saying goes, if I did not know the rudiments of my trade by this time?

Of course I write my signed articles, and many more that I do not sign.

If I do not write them, who does? I wish I knew.

I am being sued on one of them now, and if I did not write it I wish the fellow who did would come up like a man and tell me about it and "take the rap."

• • •

Furthermore, Mr. Mallon, I do not think it is such a trick to write.

Anybody who can think can write. It does not take much practice to put thoughts into words.

All you have got to do is to have some thoughts which are worth putting into words.

Some people write better than others, of course, and some people write worse.

I am probably one of those who write worse, and still I can express my own thoughts better than anyone else can express them for me.

You remember Tim Sullivan of New York. He was elected to Congress from the East Side.

Some opponent in Congress compared him satirically to Daniel Webster.

Mr. Sullivan rose with considerable dignity and said:

"I may not be a Daniel Webster. I do not pretend to be, but I can represent my own district better than Daniel Webster could."

That is the way I feel about my writing.

It may not be so "hot," but I can express my own thoughts more precisely than even a George Bernard Shaw could express them for me.

So it is with everyone, Mr. Mallon, who has a style of expression which is his own.

• • •

You ask me how I developed my own particular style.

I hardly know. I just fell into it naturally, as one develops one's own particular style of penmanship.

Do you remember when we and all the youngsters at school were taught the Spencerian system of penmanship, and how beautifully we wrote the mottoes, "Honesty Is the Best Policy" and "Evil Communications Corrupt Good Manners"—shading carefully the down strokes and bearing lightly on the up strokes?

How regular and identical our penmanship was then.

BUT, like Mary's little lamb in Pittsburgh, "Now look at the damn thing!"

You and I and every one of those youngsters have grown up to write a different hand—some thin and spidery, some wide and loose, some tall and scraggly, some so minute that you need a magnifying glass to read it, some sprawled all over the page, some clear and legible and some so undecipherable that it cannot be read even by the person who wrote it.

And as it is with penmanship, so it is with the phrasing of words in writing.

Everyone develops his own style, and that style, good or bad, is the one which is natural to him and in which he best expresses his own thoughts.

• • •

You ask me when I do my writing. I do most of it at night. There are so many executive problems during the daytime—problems of organization, problems of economics, problems of policy, circulation problems, advertising problems, print paper problems, news and picture questions, and even matters of presses and press work.

At night things cool off and quiet down. The stars come out and the youngsters go to bed—sometimes.

Then—if ever—a stray thought is likely to come swirling out of the darkness like a bat and light on you.

That is the time I do my writing, such as it is.

I know better than anyone that it is inconsequential. Most newspaper writing is.

I wish I could write books that live, like Dickens or Thackeray, whom I read devotedly when I was young, or like our own American Mark Sullivan, or Frank H. Simonds, or Carl Sandburg.

All I do is scratch down a few evanescent thoughts that are born in the night and hardly live out the day.

Sincerely yours,

W. R. HEARST.

'Thy Will Be Done' Taught Quins

MARIE ANNETTE EMELIE CECILE YVONNE

Five Tiny Soldiers Of Great Church

By MARGUERITE MOORES MARSHALL

Callander, Ont., Oct. 21 — Five curly-heads, Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie Dionne, sitting straight and strong in new high-chairs—they've already outgrown their first set—have eaten their breakfast egg and drunk their breakfast milk. Restless little hands, satisfied little mouths have been sponged clean.

A nurse Dionnes gently a tiny hand in her larger one, guides the small fingers from baby brow to chest, then across to either shoulder in the immortal gesture of the Great Church into which the quintuplets were born.

"THY WILL BE DONE"

As each baby crosses herself, her nurse murmurs that Church's brief, well-beloved prayer, "Ainal soit-il," of which, if I am not mistaken, the English equivalent is "Thy Will be done."

Then each pair of rosy little palms is pressed together and sealed with a kiss. To the babies, the simple, sacred ceremony is now only a happy game, but already they love it.

Little Marie, named for the Virgin Mary, wears a particularly sweet, serene smile as she goes through her childish gesture of grace for meal.

So Mother Church draws to herself five of her tiniest, yet most famous daughters, and they learn to pray as simply and instinctively as little children all over the world learn it in million homes.

They are learning other valuable lessons these days from the devoted and intelligent nurses whom Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe has put in charge of them. One of the first innovations I noticed, during the present visit to their nursery, was that their cribs had been changed. Yvonne now is over in the far corner, where Cecile used to be.

Marie is in the crib directly under the observation window, where beautiful Annette used to flirt with visitors, and Cecile is next to her, in Yvonne's old crib. Annette, so long the "side-partner" of Yvonne, is now the length of the nursery away beside Emilie.

SHARE AND SHARE ALIKE

There is a reason. These little ones, even so young, were displaying a jealous possessiveness and were, in at least one instance, pairing off into cliques.

So they had to learn what will be the law of the quintuplets' nursery as they grow older—that five little sisters must share and share alike in their possessions and must love one another equally.

That's why, when they reached the point of crying, unless each was put into what she had decided was her very own bed, cribs were switched on them.

And when Yvonne and Annette played too much together they were gently separated in order that each might learn to "mix" with her other sisters.

Finally, in order to give dreamy Marie a quickened interest in her surroundings, she was placed where visitors see her first and do their share in waking her up. It's working beautifully.

Marie, always an appealing little creature, now shows an increasingly delightful appreciation of what it's all about.

DRILL WITH TOOTHBRUSH

Another new lesson being imparted to the quins is that cleanliness—quite literally—is next to godliness. After the gesture of grace, at mealtimes, comes tooth-brush drill, and it's really becoming one.

At the moment of writing, Yvonne, Annette, Cecile each has eight teeth, while Emilie and Marie have seven each.

They are as perfect little pearls, too, since from birth every precaution has been taken to keep the children free from rickets.

Cecile was slower on the uptake; she put her head on one side, looked questioningly at her smiling nurse, and thought over the whole business of brushing teeth before deciding to do anything about it. Yet now she is the best toothbrush artist of them all!

They still look absurdly identical, but in personality they're all originals—no carbon copies.

BOMB SCARE AT STATE HOUSE

State troopers from Concord Barracks were rushed to the State House at daybreak today following receipt of a "tip" by night guards that a bomb was to be placed in the basement.

Information flashed to the guards expressed belief the bombers were already hiding in the basement. When the troopers arrived a thorough search was made.

Boston police were also notified and two squad cars filled with patrolmen were sent to cover all exits.

After several hours' search the guard reported "all's well" just as office employes began to arrive.

Overcome by gas fumes which he had inhaled William Perkins, 35, of Essex street, Lynn, was taken to Lynn Hospital today.

Perkins came home late, his wife, Ruth, told police, and had been drinking. She took their infant and went to the apartment below. Shortly afterward Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hodgon, in the lower apartment, heard poundings on the floor above.

Investigating, Hodgon found Perkins on the floor and gas escaping from the oven of a kitchen stove. Perkins, police said, told them he attempted suicide, but changed his mind.

$350,000 BRIBE TO BONFILS CHARGED BY TRADE BOARD

ing made by the direction of congressional enactment.

Officials of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey likewise declined to comment.

Bonfils died on February 2, 1933. J. B. Luse, then treasurer of the Colorado Interstate Gas Company, and an employe of the Standard Oil Company, of New Jersey at the time, also is dead.

The Colorado Interstate Gas Company, according to investment manuals, is controlled jointly by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the Prairie Oil & Gas Co.

WAGED CRUSADE

A study of the files of the Denver Post for the month of October reveal that prior to October 27, 1927, The Post vigorously had campaigned against the approval of a proposed natural gas ordinance which was then pending before the Denver city council.

The council previously had approved the ordinance by a vote of six to three, but with the proviso that upon petition of a certain number of voters a referendum should be held to determine the final fate of the ordinance.

The Colorado Interstate Gas Company, a $22,700,000 project, was to pipe natural gas over a 400-mile line from the Amarillo, Texas, field to Denver, where the Standard subsidiary sells the gas to the Public Service Company of Colorado, a Cities Service Company unit.

All through October up to the 26th, The Post crusaded urging the people to sign a petition for a referendum on the natural gas ordinance.

PAPER'S STATEMENT

On October 12, following this long crusade, the paper published the following statement:

"Petitions demanding that within 30 days the city council either pass a new natural gas ordinance embodying rates much lower than those originally agreed upon, or refer the new ordinance to a vote of the people were filed with the deputy city clerk Tuesday afternoon by the representatives of the Colorado Industrial Protective Association."

In this month of October also, the coal strike in the Colorado fields had become quite serious. The I. W. W.'s, the radical wing of the organized miners, had obtained complete control of the strike.

On October 27, the day on which, according to the Federal Trade Commission records the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey official sent $350,000 in cash to Bonfils, the Post used the following editorial under the caption "natural gas will end coal strike:"

"The fight against the introduction of natural gas into Colorado should be dropped right now.

"The petition for the repeal of the ordinance establishing natural gas rates should be withdrawn. All objections which have been filed with any public body against the introduction of natural gas into Denver and other parts of the state should be dropped.

"The present coal strike shows neither Denver nor Colorado generally can depend upon coal as a fuel.

"The people of the state cannot afford to have their fuel supply cut off by the whims of a lot of irresponsible men. Everything possible to hasten the introduction of natural gas into Colorado should be done.

FIGHT NOT APPRECIATED

"The Denver Post and thousands of citizens made a determined fight against natural gas to protect the jobs of the thousands of coal miners in Colorado. This fight has not been appreciated by the people for whose interest it was waged. So the thing to do is DROP IT. (The Post's Caps.)

"The sooner we get natural gas the better. It will be better fuel than coal. It will be cheaper. And IT WILL BE DEPENDABLE; and when Colorado gets natural gas, we won't have to worry about a coal strike every spring and fall.

"Denver hospitals with their thousands of patients—sick or maimed men, women, children—are facing a coal famine. The strike has cut off their fuel supply. If the hospitals were heated with gas, this couldn't happen.

CLOSING OF MINES

"The purpose of this strike is to shut down every mine in the state and prevent a single lump of coal from being mined in Colorado. They hope the sting of cold and the pangs of hunger will stir up public sentiment to force the mine operators to accede to all the demands of the I. W. W.

"The public is being pinched by the refusal of the operators to meet impossible demands of the I. W. W. If Colorado had natural gas it could go about its business without suffering.

"There is a lesson in this coal strike for Denver and every other city of the state. It is: PUT IN NATURAL GAS AND DON'T BE AT THE MERCY OF A COAL STRIKE. (Post's caps.)

"Denver has had enough time to learn this lesson. Every objection to the introduction of natural gas should be withdrawn at once. Instead of opposition, whole-hearted co-operation should be given to the project.

"The gas may cost more than some of us think it should. But at least we'll know we are going to get it when we want it. Denver wants and must have a dependable fuel supply. We have found out we can't depend upon coal. Natural gas is the only other alternative."

Twenty-one Chinese faced federal court arraignment today on narcotic charges and Boston firement were considerably incensed over two raids last night which resulted in arrest of the Chinese.

BONFILS SUCCESSOR

Shepard Silent on Accusation

Denver, Colo., Oct. 21—William C. Shepherd, who became publisher and editor of the Denver Post on the death of Frederick G. Bonfils in February, 1933, declared he would withhold formal comment on the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of an alleged payment of $350,000 to the late Publisher Bonfils in October, 1927, by an official of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, to stop opposition to a natural gas ordinance.

Formal notification from the Federal Trade Commission of charges, fixing October 29 for the public hearing in Washington, reached Mr. Shepherd last Friday.

He was found in the famous "red room" of the Post building yesterday, smiling affably and apparently not deeply concerned over the charges. He declared:

"Until I have had an opportunity to read the press story, I don't care to make a formal statement."

Kathleen Moran Makes Debut on Stage

Boston Model In Bow

WINS DESPITE HANDICAP OF RICHES

Another rich man's daughter who made good on her own will bow before the footlights in Washington this week — and thereby hangs a tale.

Dashing Kathleen Moran, darling of Boston and the capital's smart set, will get her first theatrical opportunity in Max Gordon's review "Pride and Prejudice," which opens in Washington tomorrow night.

With the premiere the beautiful Kathleen, daughter of John J. Moran, international oil titan, banker and broker, will have made good her statement that wealth need not necessarily handicap ambition.

Talented and iron-willed, Kathleen months ago tackled New York in search of work, free lancing without the assistance of her father's money.

BECAME MODEL

She took an apartment with Mary Adelins Prentice, the granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller, who also had felt the urge to make her own way, and Allison McDaniel of Washington.

Then came the wearying round for a job, any kind of a job that ultimately would lead to Broadway

"It was a bit frightful for a time," Miss Moran said today, "but finally James Montgomery Flagg let me pose for some illustrations. Then McClelland Barclay gave me work and I was taken up by commercial photographers."

The modeling came easy, for Miss Moran less than a year ago was chosen as one of Boston's best dressed women.

SPEAKS FOUR LINES

It offered also bread-and-butter money for her assault on Broadway producers.

In this, too, she was successful, even though her first part is small.

"I think I have four lines to speak," she said. But attending all the rehearsals has been a dramatic school education for me. I never realized how much I didn't know."

On Tuesday night Washington society will learn for themselves how well she has succeeded.

Meanwhile she will eclipse the star in social functions, for Miss Moran attended Trinity College in the national capital and was a favorite debutante there.

HELENA Hit by QUAKES

TOTAL SHOCKS MOUNT TO 323

Helena, Mont., Oct. 21—Windows were shattered by a fresh series of earth shocks today, some of two seconds' duration. No casualties and no major damage was reported.

At 9:00 a. m. the total number of tremors since last Friday night had reached 264 and the grand total, since October 12, was 323.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation representatives announced plans for loans for rehabilitation of damaged property.

Additional discomfort was suffered by the 400 to 500 refugees camped in National Guard tents west of the city as temperatures dropped sharply, at times to freezing.

Members of the City Council hurried plans for destruction of heavily damaged structures.

Windows along Jackson immediately adjacent to the Montana Record-Herald were broken by a shock at 3:33 a. m.

At 6:22 a. m. came the latest severe disturbance with others of lighter intensity following.

Chief of Police Roger Smith said local authorities had the situation well in hand and that there would be no necessity of martial law.

In addition to Helena police and firemen, 10 members of the state highway patrol and 35 national guardsmen are on duty in the city, patroling the business section and the danger zones.

A great deal of additional damage is expected when householders comply with requests of authorities to dislodge all loosened structures.

Removal of broken masonry already has revealed undiscovered weaknesses in many buildings, and a total of 200 homes have been condemned.

Lee Cooking School Opens Tomorrow

ANN CULKIN

Joins Cooking School Rush

All arrangements have been completed for the ninth annual Boston American-Boston Sunday Advertiser Free Cooking School, which begins 4-day sessions in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Bradford tomorrow at 2 p. m.

The refrigerator and cooking range have been connected, the stage is arranged as an efficient kitchen, with an attractive dining table setting at one side, and a large, back-stage room has taken on the appearance of a modern market. There are boxes and crates of foods, fruits and vegetables ready for their part in the interesting demonstrations. Early tomorrow these supplies will be augmented by dairy products and meats.

Edna M. Ferguson, who is to lecture at the school, has arrived and, with Martha Lee, who will be hostess during the sessions, is taking charge of last minute details.

Doors will open at 12:30 each day and early arrivals will naturally obtain the best seats. Entertainment will be provided until 2 p. m., when the sessions get under way. They will continue until 4 p. m.

One of the appreciated advantages of the Hotel Bradford auditorium is the public address system with microphone for the speaker and amplifiers which permit every word to be heard distinctly regardless of where one may sit.

Another feature of the American-Advertiser Cooking School that appeals to discriminating audiences is the lack of so-called side attractions, which often cause gatherings of this sort to take on the noise and confusion of a summer resort midway.

Miss Ferguson brings to the Cooking School a wealth of experience in marketing, preparation of all types of food and efficient homemaking.

The instructions and demonstrations are thus practical, both for the experienced cook and housewife, and for younger women who are soon to manage new homes.

All angles of cookery will be covered, from the planning and preparation of economical meals to party and special occasion menus.

Dietetics, so important to the health of adults and children, will also be discussed, as well as helpful hints on making home management more efficient and easier.

In addition to 25 baskets, to be awarded each day, there will be many valuable prizes, the largest and most varied list ever offered.

PAD Electrocutes BOY

SHOCK FATAL IN WABAN

Francis X. Rohmer, 17, of Chestnut street, Waban, died at his home today a victim of one of the strangest accidents to come to the attention of physicians.

Dr. Thomas Morton Gallagher, medical examiner, said after an investigation that moisture from the youth's body had caused a short circuit in a heating pad he had placed under his back upon retiring last night.

Shortly before 3 o'clock this morning his father, Francis Rohmer, wealthy owner of the Rohmer Wool Scouring and Carbonizing Company of Newtonville, was aroused by the calls of his son.

Rushing to the room the father was told by his son:

"Dad, I think I just got a shock from this pad. Take it away from me will you, please."

Grabbing the pad Rohmer turned and placed it upon a nearby table and then turned back to ask his son how he felt.

Death Comes

There was no answer. The boy lay in bed staring back at the father—dead.

Dr. Walter Blanchard, family physician, was summoned. He called the Newton fire and police departments for inhalators.

As the father, the dead boy's brother and two sisters looked on the firemen and policemen worked in relays with the inhalators and the prone pressure method of resuscitation for three hours without success.

According to the boy's father, the youth had been playing football yesterday and complained of a strained back.

When he retired he told members of his family that he was going to bake his back with the pad.

Medical Examiner T. Morton Gallagher expressed the opinion that a short circuit may have caused the death of the boy.

By Associated Press

Dorking, England, Oct. 21—Laura La Plante, American film actress, narrowly escaped death today in a fire which badly damaged her home, a house formerly occupied by James J. Walker, one-time mayor of New York.

Miss La Plante, wife of Irving Asher, film-director, was ill in bed when the fire started. Her physician carried her to the neighboring house a short time before the roof fell in.

Laura La Plante, blonde star of silent pictures, has been more or less inactive in Hollywood in recent years. She married Irving Asher in Paris on June 19, 1934, following her divorce from William Seiter, a Hollywood director.

'FLAG WAR' DAD PAYS

Nichols Prefers Fine to Contest

Carleton B. Nichols, Sr., father of the eight-year-old boy who is the center of Lynn's "flag rebellion," today withdrew an appeal from a $25 fine, and paid it before Judge Ralph W. Reeve in Lynn court.

He told the judge he had not intended to cause a disturbance in his son's school, as charged, and did not wish a court controversy, which he explained would be against the religious principles of his sect, "Jehovah's Witnesses."

His son is now being tutored by Edward Holton James, Harvard graduate, author and lawyer, at whose suggestion Nichols paid the visit to a Lynn classroom October 9 which resulted in the fine.

James, who lives in Concord, now goes to Lynn daily to tutor the Nichols boy. He has announced that he will form a new school with a "non-oath-swearing faculty," which he proposes to call "Jehovah's School."

Joseph F. Rutherford, former Missouri circuit judge, now a leader in the sect known as "Jehovah's Witnesses," gave him permission to start the school in North Sudbury, James announced today.

James is a nephew of Henry James, author, and William James, psychologist.

Albert Miller, 13, of Shelburne Falls, expelled from Arms Academy last Friday from non-participation in flag exercises, has been sent to the James' home in Concord by his parents, and will be tutored with young Nichols, riding to and from Lynn with James.

SABATH HEARS OF BIG BOND DEALS MADE IN BOSTON

"Big names" have been used to instill confidence in the minds of Massachusetts bondholders who subsequently lost large sums through default, it was charged today at opening of the Sabath congressional committee hearing.

In opening the hearing, Attorney Peter Borre, special investigator in Boston for the committee, told Congressman Adolph J. Sabath, committee chairman and only member sitting today, that "manipulation has been taking place, detrimental to bondholders."

A short time later, questioning Herman Mintz, president of the Metropolitan Buildings, Incorporated, since February, 1933, Borre brought out that the names of James Roosevelt and Sam Pinansky were included among directors under a reorganization.

Further questioning brought out that other directors included Clark T. Baldwin, Prescott Bigelow, Judge Jacob Kaplan, Edgar C. Rust, Max Shoolman, George Treat and that of Mintz.

WITNESS CALLED

All names except those of Roosevelt and Pinansky appeared on a prospectus which Borre produced in court.

Borre said that most members of the new board and of the Bondholders Protective Committee, later formed, to watch out for interest of the purchasers, were also members of the firms which sold the Metropolitan bonds.

Prominent Boston bankers, brokers, attorneys, directors, and realty operators were among the 50 witnesses summoned for the hearing opening.

Some of the witnesses are appearing voluntarily at the public hearing while others have been ordered to be present by the committee, which is armed with almost unprecedented authority.

The three largest bond defaults on which the committee seeks information are those of $4,000,000 of bonds by the Boston Metropolitan Buildings, Inc.; $10,000,000 by the American Bonding and Mortgage Company, and $40,000,000 of securities by the Fisk Tire and Rubber Company.

Congressman Sabath, chairman of the committee, and Murray Garsson, director of the nation-wide probe of $20,000,000,000 in investors' losses, were the first of the committee to arrive in Boston.

FROZEN CREDIT

Those scheduled to reach here today include Congressmen Clarence A. Fuller of Arkansas, Thomas O'Malley, Wisconsin; Martin J. Kennedy and Franklin D. Culkin, New York; Everett M. Dirksen, Illinois, and E. J. O'Connor, technical advisor, of Washington, D. C.

After conferring with Attorney Borre, recently appointed special investigator, Congressman Sabath said:

"This bonding racket, as it has been carried on since 1930, must cease. Because of it there is a frozen credit of upwards of fifteen billions of dollars in the country today.

"The use of high standing names has deceived investors into depositing their money with these so-called reorganizations.

"Investigation has shown that the desire has been primarily to protect the issuers of these bonds from the law and to give the investors no protection whatever, legally or otherwise.

"In several large cities of the country, the committee has already moved for indictments. There is some indication here that criminal prosecution will result from the evidence uncovered to date."

BUSINESS MEN CALLED

Prominent business men who are to appear either voluntarily or under subpoenas include the following named by members of the committee:

Carl P. Dennett, head of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; Charles Pingra, of Choate, Hall & Stuart; George H. Treat, of E. H. Rollins & Son, Inc.; Alexander Whiteside, S. E. White and James H. Eaton.

Others include Barton Corneau, trustee of S. W. Strauss & Company; R. Ami Cutter, of Storey, Thorndike, Palmer & Dodge; Prescott Bigelow, of Hayden, Stone Company; Charles G. Rowley, of Peabody, Brown, Rowley and Storey, and Attorney William K. Bean, of Cabot, Cabot & Forbes.

Also appearing as witnesses are Charles W. Hubbard, Abram Berkowitz, of Ropes, Gray, Boyden and Perkins; Abraham Horowitz, of Gutterman and Gutterman; Max Shoolman, Stephen Lynch, representing Paramount-Publix, and Herman Mintz, president of the Boston Metropolitan Buildings, Inc.

EVARTS ON LIST

Others named by the committee as prospective witnesses at the hearings are: Richard C. Evarts, trustee; Frederick G. Van Etten, Anne Hussey, Orrin G. Wood, William E. Gilbert, Carl H. Behr, Theodore G. Smith, John C. Traphagen, Edward D. Levy, Charles A. Dana, Mrs. Mary Pazolini, Robert Lowell, Robert D. McGaw and Ronald C. Guy.

In connection with the Hotel Bellevue reorganization, the committee will hear evidence from Francis Chamberlain, Pitney Jewell and Hollis T. Gleason.

Others scheduled to appear include: Robert A. Nordblom, Samuel L. Lowe, William E. Stanwood and Charles Moorfield Storey.

Although the Boston Finance Commission today approved a loan of $675,000 for snow removal equipment, it suggested methods of using the equipment be improved before the order is executed.

An order for $800,000 for the same purpose has been pending since last January, but was reduced to $675,000 on report of a special commission appointed by the mayor.

The communication approving the loan complained of a lack of organization and a lack of efficiency in the handling of snow last year.

It added that, so far as the commission knows, no attempt has since been made to improve the organization.

The communication, addressed to Mayor Mansfield, made the observation that "purchase of equipment would not remove snow."

The commission asked that equipment be purchased in one contract on competitive basis, rather than be split among several companies without advertising.

Miss Nissen Again Seeks Freedom

Los Angeles, Oct. 21—Greta Nissen, Scandinavian film star, is seeking marital freedom through an annulment, instead of a divorce.

This was revealed here today, when the superior court received a petition from London, where Miss Nissen is making a film. She requested that her Mexican marriage to Weldon Heyburn be declared void.

The petition contended that when Miss Nissen and Heyburn eloped to Tia Juana three years ago they neglected to bring proper witnesses and were not residents of Mexico legally.

Miss Nissen sought a Mexican divorce two years ago and Heyburn did not contest the application. But neither obtained the desired freedom.

At the time, both declared they were sacrificing their love to preserve their friendship, which they called a "far better thing."

Later they were reconciled, but later still, they "sacrificed" their love again, explaining respect for each other was "life's greatest boon."

SCANDAL IN CLOSET

Crown Prince, Beauty Deaths Bared

By Associated Press

Vienna, Oct. 21—The historic scandal in a Hapsburg closet—the shooting of Crown Prince Rudolph and Baroness Vetsera—became the talk of the nation today, with publication of the memoirs of Rudolph's widow. The former Princess Stephanie.

Her version is that the deaths of the crown prince and the pretty baroness, whose bullet-riddled bodies were found in the royal hunting lodge at Mayerling in 1889, were the fulfillment of a suicide pact.

Vienna newspapers printed long excerpts from the book, which was published in Germany by the 73-year-old widow who is now the wife of the Hungarian Prince Lonjay.

SILENT HALF CENTURY

Monarchists were greatly agitated by publication of the memoirs now after the widow had maintained a silence of almost half a century. Her description of the manners and conduct of the Hapsburg court was termed in some quarters the second serious blow within a week to the cause of those wishing restoration of the Hapsburgs.

The first was the elimination from the cabinet of the pro-Hapsburg ministers, Emil Fey and Josef Reither, through reconstruction of the government.

"SHE LOVED HIM"

The death of Rudolph has been a classic mystery, with historians inclined to the suicide theory which is now supported by the woman whom fate cheated of the chance to be empress of the old Austro-Hungarian empire.

Stephanie, a Belgian princess, described her eight-year marriage to Rudolph as a burden of increasing weight.

She told of his association with numerous women and related that, toward the end, Rudolph made fantastic plots for political adventures and threatening suicide.

"But he didn't want to die alone," the former princess wrote, "and Vetsera loved him so blindly that she went with him."

She asserted Emperor Franz Josef refused to intercede when she tried to explain the situation to him.

DR. MACKEY ENTERS RACE AGAIN FOR SCHOOL BOARD

Dr. Charles E. Mackey, chairman of the Boston School Committee, was a strong candidate for re-election today after launching his campaign last night at Hotel Kenmore before more than 750 loyal workers.

Stressing the need of a man with medical experience on the board of the school committee, Dr. Mackey reviewed the work done by the board in advancing the health of Boston's school children during his term of office. He upheld his stand in closing the schools because of the infantile paralysis epidemic.

Dr. Mackey said:

"I took it upon my shoulders to postpone the opening of the schools because I felt and still feel that the prevention of the death of a single child or the maiming of its body is important enough to close the schools for a year if necessary.

"There are a large number of undernourished children susceptible to tuberculosis in our schools. They are fed, scalding meals at the city expense and I am happy to say that many of them have gained 15 to 20 pounds at the end of the year.

"This year 500 X-rays were taken of these youngsters and not a trace of this disease was found in their system. We did this without retarding their mental growth or forcing them to spend years in a sanitarium.

"Children who are convalescing from serious illnesses are given four to six hours of private instruction a week at their homes so that when they return to their classes they are not behind in their school work.

"With all these extra health benefits we were still able to reduce the school budget from $72,000,000 in 1928 to $17,000,000 in 1934 and maintain the usual high standard of instruction."

Dr. Mackey was introduced by his close friend and medical colleague, Dr. Lynde Gately of East Boston, who spoke of the wholehearted support the medical profession gave the doctor for his postponement of the school openings in September of this year.

As the destroyer was pulling into port, the battleship Arkansas sailed for Norfolk to undergo overhauling.

JEWISH DRIVE OPENS HALF SUBSCRIBED

With nearly one-half its total already subscribed, active campaigning starts today in the annual two-week drive of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies for $550,000.

The campaign was launched at Hotel Statler during a banquet attended by 1200 prominent Jewish residents of the city.

Although total contributions for the fund were not tabulated, drive officials announced that more money had been subscribed before the banquet than was realized at the dinner last year.

The gathering represented the largest outpouring of its kind in the history of the Boston Jewish charities.

Principal speaker at the gathering was Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland who discussed the German situation and its influence throughout the world.

"When I look on this gathering, meeting to give to those less fortunate," he declared, "I am sure that Hitler has not written the last chapter in Jewish history. If Hitler and his history are three years old, we are 3000 years old."

JANE WYATT
In Play by Cupid

IN ROOSEVELT N. Y. HOME

In a show promoted by Dan Cupid, Jane Wyatt, stage and screen star, will play the feminine lead at Christmas time, Boston society folk learned today.

According to an announcement by her mother, Mrs. Christopher Wyatt of 13 Lexington avenue, New York, Jane, sister of Mrs. William A. Russell of Boston and North Andover, will marry Edgar Bethune Ward, Harvard 1929.

Ward, close friend of James Roosevelt, a Harvard classmate, is from Santa Barbara, Cal., but now lives in New York. The romance started several years ago during a house party at the Franklin D. Roosevelt home in Hyde Park, N. Y.

A debutante in 1929, Jane attended Miss Chapin's School and Barnard College, then sought a career on the stage. As a result, she was dropped from the Social Register, an incident which bothered her not at all.

From Broadway footlights she stepped into the films and is at present in Hollywood—one of the best of the younger actresses.

She is a grandniece of the late Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer, for years leader of New York's social set, and also is descended from the celebrated Rufus King, twice American minister to the Court of St. James.

Her great-great grandfather, Charles King, was an early president of Columbia College and also was editor of the New York American of that day.

CURB ON AUTO DAMAGE URGED

Attorney-General Paul A. Dever was asked by Attorney Wycliffe C. Marshall of Watertown to "curb and prevent" the "unauthorized practice of law by insurance companies' selling motor vehicle liability policies in Massachusetts.

Marshall complained that insurances companies "foster unauthorized practice of law in two ways. First, by settling claims with persons not members of the bar, who, as a means of livelihood, represent persons having claims against insured automobile owners. Secondly, there is the corporate practice of law in defense of automobile owners against liability claims."

Marshall advised the attorney general he could get the names of non-lawyer representatives of damage claimants and facts connected with such law activities from the files of the insurance commissioner.

Deadline on City Ballot Tomorrow

Tomorrow at 5 p. m. is the deadline for withdrawal of candidates who have filed nomination papers with the city election commission for places on the ballot in the school committee and city council campaigns. Except for the campaigning of Dr. Charles E. Mackey of South Boston, who is seeking re-election, and of John C. Flaherty of Dorchester, a close friend of Governor Curley, there has been little activity in the school committee campaign.

QUICK! STOP THAT COLD

IN THE DRY OR FIRST STAGE!

A cold ordinarily goes through three stages: The Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage.

A cold is twice as easily stopped in the first as in the second or third stages. In fact, to let a cold run beyond the first stage is inviting trouble.

As your doctor will tell you there is nothing better you can take for a cold than Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It is expressly a cold tablet and not a "cure-all". It is internal treatment which a cold requires. It does four important things.

First, it opens the bowels. Second, it checks the infection in the system. Third, it relieves the headache and fever. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

That's the four-fold treatment you want and in Bromo Quinine you get it in the form of a single tablet.

Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful and is safe to take. For more than forty years it has been the largest selling cold tablet in the world, the formula always keeping pace with Modern Medicine.

When a cold threatens, do the sensible thing and go right to your druggist for a package of Bromo Quinine.

Take two of the tablets at four-hour intervals and you'll usually check the cold in 24 hours. That's the speed you want for comfort and for safety.

All drug stores sell Bromo Quinine and the few pennies' cost may save you dollars in doctor's bills.

ITALIAN ARMY FACES 150,000; WAR'S ZERO HOUR NEAR

Aduwa, Ethiopia, Oct. 21—Moving towards a rendezvous high in the canyons of the Tembien mountains south of here are two great masses of Ethiopian warriors, totaling from 150,000 to 200,000, making ready for the first major offensive of the war.

Italian bombing airplanes reconnoitering daily over the wild territory in the triangle formed by Aksum, Adigrat and Makale, brought this word back to the thousands of young Italians straining on the 50-mile front here, eager for the zero hour that they expect is imminent.

Ras Seyum, with a force the flyers estimate at from 50,000 to 100,000, is marching in the direction of Aksum, and Ras Kassa, said to have "twice as many men" as Seyum, is leading his warriors up from the south.

ITALIANS NEAR MAKALE

Makale is also believed to be the next objective of the Italians. Military tentacles are already being stretched out southward through the mountain ravines below Adigrat, which is on the Italian left flank, and due north of Makale.

Field Marshal Pietro Badoglio, the Italian chief of staff, has arrived at the front and will confer with General Emilio De Bono, commander of the armies in the field.

Italian airplanes have harassed the Abyssinians with machine gun fire, without doing a great deal of damage, but as a part of their "moral" campaign against the natives.

The Italian purpose is to win their way southward with as little bloodshed as possible, inducing the tribesmen, if possible, to surrender.

Italian military leaders are hopeful Ras Seyum will follow the example of Ras Gugsa and many other minor chieftains and priests and surrender.

Ras Gugsa's 12,000 tribesmen who surrendered with him are now all well armed and are ready, if necessary, to participate in the Italian offensive through Tigre province, of which Ras Gugsa has been proclaimed governor.

If the Ethiopians do not surrender, according to the Italians, they run the risk of starving far from their sources of food supply, or of being annihilated by the fire of the mechanized Italian forces.

Italian military experts question that the Ethiopians will attempt to hold Makale, but believe that their aim, if they resist, will be to cut the Italian communications north of that town.

Flyers reported to headquarters they had bombed an Ethiopian party in Viru county, on the Eastern Gralla plain, a encampment southeast of Bireutan, and a munitions dump at Ombager.

Southern Italian Army In 60-Mile Advance

Province, the capture of Gorrahei would strengthen the Italian position already improved by the seizure of the fortress of Dagnerhei last Friday.

Today, Gen. Rudolfo Graziani's forces had already advanced 60 miles beyond their original line, according to this report, and were farther into Ethiopia than the northern army.

The easiest possession of the Rich bases such as those in the Sciavell region was said by military authorities to be of the highest importance.

The region has been the center of Ethiopian resistance and furnished food and water in abundance in the otherwise desert region.

During their forward movement, it was stated, the Italians took and occupied the towns of Burdodi and Sciavell which, like the stronghold of Dagnerrei are along the Webbe Shibeli river.

Military authorities said General Graziani soon was expected to take Gorrahei, which is on the way to the Harar region. (Gorrahei is sometimes spelled Gorahai.)

The report of the Italian victory came here by airplane. After the battle, a pilot flew the length of Ethiopia to bring the report to headquarters.

FORTRESS ON CLIFF

He said there was hard fighting over difficult ground. He described the Dagnerrei fortress as located high on a cliff with a sheer drop from its battlements of 250 feet. Various parts of the redoubts were protected by iron spikes.

He said that two columns of battalions charged up the two sides, that the fighting was slow, but that the victory was overwhelming.

Burdodi, which was merely reported as "occupied," also was taken by assault and was burned as the defending force fled.

50 Natives, 14 Italians Killed in Fierce Battle

By International News Service

Rome, Oct. 21— In one of the most bitter clashes the southern sector has seen, 50 Ethiopians and 14 Italians were killed and the important fortified village of Dagnerie occupied by the Italians after an aerial bombardment and infantry struggle, an official communique announced today.

In addition to the capture of Dagnerrei, officially announced, the Italians advanced in the valley of the Webbe Shibeli river, first occupying Fort Burdodi, 15 miles northwest of Mustahil, according to the Asmara correspondent of La Tribuna.

There they captured an Ethiopian flag, two cannon, several machine guns, a number of rifles, hundreds of mules and many prisoners, the correspondent reported.

This victory on the southern front, along with that at Dagnerri, is all the more important, the correspondent said, because in the last few weeks the Ethiopian command put great care in defense preparations in this region, fearing the Italian offensive.

The communique said:

"During the daytime on Oct. 18, ten airplanes of the Aircraft Division in Italian Somaliland bombarded for one hour the Ethiopian garrison at Dagnerie, in the Somali region of Sciavell, on the Webbe Shebeli river.

"The garrison had been preparing to attack our lines.

PLANES DAMAGED

"After the bombardment, in the course of which five of our planes were slightly damaged by rifle shots, a detachment of the Mustahil group, led by Major Fava of the Grenadiers, attacked, and, despite tenacious resistance, they overcame the enemy and occupied their fortified position.

"Beyond this position the Ethiopians, pursued by our troops, were dispersed, leaving on the ground 50 dead and many wounded. Several scores of prisoners were taken.

"Our losses in the Mustahil detachment here were 14 dead and 40 wounded.

ARMS CAPTURED

"In the fortified position, the enemy abandoned two cannons, two machine guns, two motor trucks, and hundreds of rifles, with many cases of ammunition.

"There participated in the action together with our debats (irregular bands) armed forces of Sultan Olol-Dinle, chief of the region of Sciavell, who was recently under the Ethiopian government, and who has now passed to our side. He asked to be allowed to participate in the engagement to give proof of his loyalty.

"In consequence of the victorious engagement at Dagneri, the whole region of Sciavell is now under our control.

"On the Eritrean front, there is nothing to report beyond normal strategical reconnaissances by our aircraft."

MOTHER HEART UNEASY, FACE IS BRAVE

By Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 21—Donna Rachele Mussolini, following the Spartan creed of her Premier husband, keeps to herself and fears for her two soldier boys, aviators on the East African front.

Both Vittorio and Bruno, Il Duce's eldest sons, have been under fire as their planes flew over Ethiopia and passed through anti-aircraft barrages.

Mussolini's reputation for personal bravery is assurance enough that he would not encourage premature tears at home. He encouraged his sons to fly and sent them to the East African front with a smile.

If they should be killed, Fascists would expect him to take his grief as he expects all Fascists to take theirs—it is part of his creed to "li e dangerously."

Donna Rachele, who is entitled by law to be called "Your Excellency," is the mother of five children. Her life is devoted to her husband and her children. She lives up to Il Duce's belief that woman's place is in the home.

Few know exactly what she thinks of the risks of war. She is one of the most isolated women in Italy.

Mussolini keeps his family life from the public view and knowledge.

He is dictator of Italy, but friends say he is little more than a husband and father at home.

He gets his ears pulled once each year by the children on his birthday. He may even be scolded from time to time.

Mussolini himself was steeled by the early hardships of his Fascist creed to face trouble calmly. Nevertheless, he has a soft spot in his heart. The mother was a humble school teacher.

If Vittorio and Bruno appear in the casualty lists some day, Il Duce and his wife probably will put on brave faces, even though their hearts will hurt.

the Mediterranean might be taken shortly, to be followed by definite Ethiopian peace talks.

It was believed this feeling was based on secret conversations going on between Rome and Paris, of which the British government was being kept informed.

It was plainly stated that any plan broached must be satisfactory to Ethiopia, Italy and the League of Nations, and ultimately must be concluded within the framework of the league.

By Associated Press

Paris, Oct. 21—Premiers Pierre Laval was reported in unofficial circles today to have received suggestions from Premier Mussolini for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war.

The premier was said by these sources to be awaiting the debate in the British Parliament this week before submitting the suggestions to London.

Officials said "the greatest problem now seems to be to get Emperor Haile Selassie to accept Italian terms."

Italian Ship Told to Quit Kenya Port

By Associated Press

Mombasa, Kenya, Oct. 21—The Kenya government ordered the Italian steamship Duraun Corda to quit this East African seaport within 24 hours after the vessel arrived Friday night, it became known today.

Authorities said the action was ordered by the British government for application of neutrality rules unrelated to sanctions.

Instead of taking on 1000 tons of coal, the ship was allowed only 125 tons to take her to Chisimaio, an Italian Somaliland port.

NOTIZIE ODIERNE DELLA GUERRA

This is an Italian translation of the Italian-Ethiopian war news which appears elsewhere in this paper today.

By FORMER LIEUTENANT GIOVANNI NANIA

PRONTI PER LA BATTAGLIA

Centocinquantamila guerrieri etiopici sono stati concentrati stamane sui monti del Tembien, a sud di Adua, pronti per entrare in azione, mentre si avvicina l'ora decisiva per uno scontro in grande stile che porra' di fronte le legioni italiane e le forze abissine di difesa.

Il Maresciallo Pietro Badoglio, Capo di Stato Maggiore Generale ha completato stamane il suo giro d'ispezione su tutto il settore del Nord, rendendosi personalmente conto dell'efficienza delle truppe e della coordinazione dei vari servizi.

Tutto e' pronto per la battaglia. Il comando italiano crede fermamente e spera che l'esercito etiopico voglia impegnarsi in massa, cosi' da permettere l'impiego delle mitragliatrici, fucili automatici, tanks, reparti motorizzati ed artiglieria leggiera da campagna a maggiore vantaggio delle truppe italiane.

Il Conte Galeazzo Ciano, genero di Mussolini e comandante delle squadrone d'aviazione "La Disperata" che ha bombardato e mitragliato con tanto successo le truppe etiopiche di concentrazione nelle ultime due settimane, si crede che verra' chiamato a far parte del "consiglio di guerra" stabilito al quartiere generale italiano.

Squadriglie aeree in ricognizione hanno rapportato che orde di armati abissini al comando di Ras Kassa, si sono spostate verso il Nord, congiungendosi all'armata di Ras Seyum sui monti del Tembien, intorno a Macalle', costituendo una linea di difesa forte di oltre 150,000 uomini.

NUOVO PIANO DI PACE?

Nei quartieri autorevoli londinesi circola oggi la voce di un nuovo piano di pace adesso allo studio nelle cancellerie di Londra, Parigie Roma.

Per quanto mancano precise notizie, non si esclude la possibilita' di unaccordo i cui primi sintomi si rilevano dal fatto che l'Inghilterra si prepara a richiamare parte della sua flotta adesso dislocata nel Mediterraneo, segno questo delle migliorate relazioni anglo-italiane e segno di maggiore comprensione da parte dell' Inghilterra.

Tali voci sono basate su pretese conversazioni segrete fra Parigi e Roma e di cui il governo inglese e' al corrente.

Da Parigi si ha notizia che il Primo Ministro Pierre Laval avrebbe ricevuto una nuova proposta che se accetta porrebbe imposta che se accetta porrebbe immediata fine alla guerra. Il piu' grande problema—dicono le informazioni—e' quello di poter convincere l'Imperatore Haile' Selassie' di accettare le proposte italiane.

Informano da Addis Abeba che il Presidente Mussolini intende iniziare negoziazioni di pace direttamente con l'Imperatore Selassie', e che incaricherebbe della cosa il Conte Luigi Vinci-Gigliucci, ancora in quella citta' malgrado il passaporto gli sia stato consegnato da ben 11 giorni.

David Lloyd George, Primo Ministro Inglese durante la guerra mondiale, ha accusato ieri il gabinetto britannico di voler fomentare il conflitto Italo-Etiopico come una scusa per giungere ad una guerra mondiale peggiore di quella combattuta dal 1914 al 1918. Il disarmamento e' finito, ha dichiarato, chiamando Mussolini "Il nuovo Dio della guerra europea."

Continuando nel suo attacco contro il gabinetto, Lloyd George ha messo in ridicolo la Lega delle Nazioni per le sanzioni votate contro Mussolini, dichiarando che l'Italia occupera' l'Abissinia a dispetto di tutti gli ostacoli.

"Voi credete — ha detto Lloyd George—che le armate italiane marceranno a casa dichiarando che la guerra e' finita perche' 50 nazioni rifiutano di compare 1 limoni Italiani?"

Lo Statuto della Lega, in nome del quale l'Italia e' stata posta al bando ed in nome del quale si sono votate le sanzioni, "e' il piu' importante documento da che esiste il Nuovo Testamento" ha asserito Lloyd George. "ma da quando la Lega ha permesso al Giappone d'impossessarsi della Manciuria, la sua autorita' e' cessata. Tutte le nazioni hanno d'allora un occhio sulla propieta' del loro vicini . . . Sanzioni finanziarie ed economiche? L'Italia e' sulla via d'impossessarsi dell'Abissinia e tutto quello che noi possiamo dire e': "Se voi non ritornate, noi non compreremo i vostri limoni!"

BRITAIN CURBS ITALIAN SHIPS

By Associated Press

London, Oct. 21—High authoritative sources revealed today that British crown colonies and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan had decided to apply against Italy and neutrality rules laid down by the Hague Convention of 1907.

It was understood that the Egyption government has made the same decision.

This means that no Italian vessels of war or Italian vessels carrying provisions or arms from the Italian ports in East Africa will hereafter be permitted to remain in British ports more than 24 hours or allowed to take on more than enough fuel and supplies to reach the next Italian port.

FRANCE CALLS "WAR BABIES"

By International News Service

Paris, Oct. 21—More than 100,000 "war babies" today and tomorrow are being added to the great French conscript army, swelling the garrisons along the eastern frontier in implied proof that France still dreads a spread of the Ethiopian war to Europe.

While Premier Pierre Laval, given a "vote of confidence" in yesterday's senatorial elections, continued his mediation between Britain and Italy, the youths born in the last half of 1914—many of whose fathers were killed in the war before their sons ever saw them—flocked to the colors.

U. S. Keeps Hands Off League Fight

By International News Service

Washington, Oct. 21—The United States government will refrain at present from making any promises to the League of Nations concerning co-operation with League efforts to check Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

A definite disposition to avoid all foreign commitments in the present phase of Europe's squabble was evident in official quarters.

Selassie's Kinsman Bows to Italy's Power

Bowing in surrender to General Emilio de Bono (center, bearded), Ras Haile Selassie Gugsa offers the services of his 15,000 followers to Mussolini as Italian officers and priests look on. Ras Gugsa yesterday was installed as governor of Tigre Province, a territory the Italians soon will march through. Photo was flown from Asmara, Eritrea, to Rome and thence relayed to London by telephoto and by radio to the United States.

SELASSIE EMBRACES MEN LEAVING FOR WAR FRONT

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent
Copyright 1935, International News Service

Addis Ababa, Oct. 21—While the League of Nations pause and international negotiations faltered, Emperor Haile Selassie, reckoning realistically that Ethiopians are going to have to go on fighting, today bade farewell to 1500 officers of his imperial guard, and in a scene of true Ethiopian sentiment he embraced each twice while the Empress looked on.

Departure of the guard for the North was taken to mean the Emperor had given up hope the League would check Italy before considerably more actual fighting had taken place.

As the Emperor emphasized to International News Service, there is not the least chance he will consent to negotiate with Premier Mussolini on the basis of Italian troops remaining in their present positions in Ethiopia.

News that Gen. Emilio De Bono, Italian commander, had proclaimed a protectorate over Tigre and Agame provinces only evoked bitterness here.

Ethiopian authorities reiterated their declaration that Italy never will be permitted to permanently possess these provinces, which they now partially occupy.

All the property of Ras Gugsa, northern chieftain, who deserted to the Italians, the Emperor today gave Fitourari Nagash, a relative of the traitor.

Fitourari is the title of a full general, compared with dejasmatch, a major-general.

Nagash, a chieftain of Tigre province, won this considerable compensation—the deserter was well off—because the Emperor wished to reward faithfulness in a family which is deeply ashamed of the treachery of the man who the Italians made a vassal governor of Tigre.

A large detachment of imperial guards left for the north today to provide an escort for the caravan of Emperor Haile Selassie, who plans to leave the capital for the battlefield soon.

(Editor's Note: This was taken as indication the Negus believes the time has arrived to launch his long-delayed offensive against the invading Italians. Ethiopian warriors have been concentrating in the north country for several weeks, massing for a big battle at the signal of their emperor.)

The first air connection between the Ethiopian capital and the outside world was established yesterday when an American biplane roared into Addis Ababa carrying the famous explorer, Henri De Vilmorin, with the noted French pilot, Rene Drouillet.

De Vilmorin, a wealthy sportsman, mining engineer and journalist, had spent a year in Ethiopia and knows the language and the people intimately.

De Vilmorin's arrival caused a sensation at the airport. The American Negro pilot, Charles Robinson, a colonel in the Ethiopian army and the only real pilot among the lot, welcomed De Vilmorin enthusiastically, as his was the first American airplane ever seen in Ethiopia.

Robinson has been attempting ever since his arrival to get an American airplane and show the Emperor what real flying is like, as the imperial hangars contain nothing now but museum pieces.

De Vilmorin told International News Service that he had taken 29 flying hours from Paris to Addis Ababa, but he stayed a couple of months in Egypt, where he flew to the Libyan border.

In order to avoid Italian war planes De Vilmorin went to Djibouti, and, when he took off from there, climbed to 11,000 feet. Maintaining this level, he flew straight to Addis Ababa.

False-Bearded Double Goes To Battle Front for Selassie

PSEUDO KING TO CARRY RED UMBRELLA

By Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Oct. 21—A dummy official called "Likamokwas" will serve as a camouflage King of Kings to protect Emperor Haile Selassie from danger when he goes to the front.

The ghost sovereign, whose full name is Likamokwas Haile, dresses exactly like the emperor, wears a false beard and carries an imperial red umbrella in imitation of former kings who regarded a parasol as an indispensable adjunct to battle.

The umbrella is intended to attract the attention of the enemy to Likamokwas and to divert notice from the real emperor, who dresses in plain raiment and occupies a protected position while the enemy is attacking.

Legend has it that failure to provide such a double cost Emperor Johannes his life.

Riding into battle against the fierce Mahdi dervishes of the Sudan, Johannes is supposed to have carried the customary red umbrella but he had no shadow emperor to deceive the Dervishes who spotted him and killed him.

Former Emperor Menelek, Ethiopians say, had a twin king throughout the battle of Aduwa in 1896 to whom was attributed his emergence alive from the fray.

Even after Menelek was confined to the palace for years with paralysis, he still had a double in an attempt to convince the populace that he was well.

Haile Selassie's double, while not holding an exact likeness to the emperor, resembles him in many ways, being of about the same age and height, and having similar features, hair, eyes and beard.

He always takes a place immediately beside the Emperor o nthe throne, but in battle he moves about in lively fashion like the Emperor himself, to deceive the enemy.

Haile Selassie With His Umbrella

Cactus Blinds Soldiers

Three hundred Italian soldiers constructing a road from Mount Mussa Ali to the Ethiopian border on the central front were reported blinded when they attempted to cut down the deadly Diphebia cactus, the emanations of which are said to be capable of causing total blindness.

Apparently the Fascist forces had not been warned against this pernicious fungus, which in South American countries is cut down only at a distance with long, pole-like scythes.

Leashed Lions Parade

Groups of leashed lions marched into the capital from the interior today, alongside groups of Emperor Haile Selassie's warriors.

This caused foreigners to believe the tribesmen might loose the lions against the Italians, but officials explained the beasts were intended as presents for the Emperor.

ITALY WARNED OF REPRISALS ON GAS WAR

By Associated Press

London, Oct. 21—The Ethiopian legation to London warned Italy in a lengthy statement today that "the most unfortunate consequences" would follow Italy use of "ghastly methods" of poison gas bombs and dum dum and explosive bullets.

The Legation stated that of Italy's use of "unfair and ultra-civilized methods of warfare," the Legation has impartial substantiation despite public denials by Ambassador Dino Grandi of Italy, and that it "will lead to most unfortunate consequences, not only to Italians who will, of course, deserve it, but to all white peoples as well."

"The whites," the statement said, "will be intensely hated by all the peoples of Africa and, we think, of Asia also for years to come."

The statement said:

"We take the opportunity hereby to warn the Italian forces if they continue to use such ghastly methods against simple, unarmed peoples that, notwithstanding the order of his majesty, Emperor Haile Selassie I, it will not be possible to restrain the wilder section o fthe Ethiopian army from retaliating in some similar savage method on Italian soldiers who may happen to fall into their hands."

The statement refers to the Ethiopians as "savages' who only know fighting bravely with ordinary weapons and as man do man and who never kill women, children, or animals."

Ethiopian Tribal Chiefs And Clergy Swing to Duce

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Copyright, 1935, by International News

Asmara, Eritrea, Oct. 20 (Noon) (Via Rome, Delayed)—Clergy and chieftains poured into Aduwa and Aksum today to swear allegiance to Mussolini—placing their seal of approval on Il Duce's armed campaign to civilize their country.

The latest to submit include the clergy of 200 Coptic churches and 15 Moslem mosques, besides several tribal chieftains and their soldiers, who brought in their arms with them.

The most important chieftain is Haile Mariam, whose father is ruler of Assaba province, and is still with Ras Seyum in the Tembien mountains south of Aduwa.

It is hoped that when his father learns of the son's action, he will follow Mariam's example, thus saving his large force of troops from the fate which is almost certain to befall the Abyssinians who resist the Italian advance with an armed stand.

While preparing for further pushes to the south, Italy is going ahead with non-military reorganization of the natives in the territory already occupied, and pursuing a program of civilization.

Family heads, tribal chiefs and patriarchs of the Holy City of Aksum assembled in the courtyard of the old holy residence of Ras Seyum. In the shade of long avenues of tall eucalyptus trees, they were addressed by an Italian political officer of national police, who arranged an election of precinct chiefs and heads of compound quarters in Aksum.

He told them that slavery had been abolished, and also announced the civilian population is free from all taxation for the present, at least.

Within the rock residence, now the colonial administration building, were huge quantities of grain, food for man and beast, previously requisitioned from the population by the edict of Ras Seyum.

Askaris (native troops) filled sacks with this grain, which the Italians are returning to the population from whom it had been taken.

AT FIRST GLANCE you'd probably say these frocks are from a smart specialty shop, or—since Jean Muir and Anita Louise wear them—specially designed to enhance the beauty of Hollywood stars. Actually, they are new Pictorial Review patterns and need nothing more in their creation for your own wardrobe than some lengths of pretty fabric clever hands and a sewing machine. Left, Anita Louise wears an afternoon frock of matelasse crepe with silk cord trimming. Wide pleated sleeves accentuate the simplicity and slimness of the frock. Right, Jean Muir shows a metal cocktail dress whose shirtmaker lines are endowed with a great deal of soft feminity.

COLOR AND STYLE OF NEW HAND BAGS

ONE BLACK BAG won't see you through the winter any more. You must have one to match each costume. And what with the current rantings on the subject of renaissance colors and styles, alligator handbags in renaissance colors are about the last word in the style picture.

There is, for instance, the gate frame bag, in wine, green, or maple alligator, over a foot long and almost as wide, which folds flat under your arm and opens out to the proportions of a weekend bag.

GLITTERING GIRL

By May Christie

CHAPTER XVIII

The waiter arrived with their cocktails. "Sugar" had ordered a couple of "old-fashioneds" which are pretty potent. He calculated this would loosen Vernon's tongue, and give him the necessary cues how to proceed . . .

She toyed with a piece of pineapple on the end of a tiny wooden stick.

"Let's have a toast," suggested "Sugar" softly. He tilted his glass up. Let's drink to what I see in your eyes and what you see in mine, Beautiful!"

"I see two little demons dancing in yours. I wouldn't trust either of 'em!" She laughed merrily.

His hand touched her knee. "You see two fires—that you have lit, darling—"

"As glib as that that? Aren't you the experienced person!"

"I forget everything when I look at you. Your eyes are like pools where a man could drown himself for love of you."

"Now how often have you said that to other people?"

"Not at all. But I shan't say any more since you're so cruel."

Sips Her Cocktail

"You mean you won't play if I won't play? All right, "Sugar." You were rightly named. You're a flatterer."

Vernon sipped her cocktail daintily. Her eyes sparkled, and her face was rosily flushed. It was rather fun to bait this gay philanderer . .

But when he began to grow more and more serious, she fervently wished that Nan would return.

For the little restaurant had filled completely now, and among the lunchers were several people she had met in the past few days.

The effeminate gossip who had turned up in bright purple at the Sunday Morning Pajama Breakfast Club had arrived, and was seated directly opposite her.

This would be a nice tidbit for him to circulate!

The red-like girl called Jemima walked in with her poet boyfriend. Vernon could see them whispering and nudging each other as they stared in her direction. With their eyes upon her, she wished that "Sugar" wouldn't ogle her so, and keep murmuring idotic things . . .

It only needed Prince Karinoff to arrive with Martina de Bray to complete the party!

She wouldn't let thoughts dwell on the recalcitrant Terry . .

But he was worth all of them, her heart told her.

"Beautiful, you don't listen to one word I say. And we have such a little time together!"

"Hush. People will hear you."

Holds Her Hand

"Worrying again about the mob! People always do gossip, so what does it matter if we give them further substance?"

"Incorrible man! I wish Nan would come back."

"The devil with Nan! You'd think I was her property. Don't you know it's you I want?"

"Then how want something that you can't get, 'Sugar.' Aren't you ashamed of that name?"

"Not a bit of it. It refers to my intense'y amiable disposition."

"How modest you are!"

"I'm as proud as a peacock right at this minute. I hope everyone I know sees me right here with you—holding your hand—like this. Beautiful."

He made as though to raise it to his lips, but Vernon pulled back.

"Are you mad? Look at those people 'atching us. Let go of my hand."

"I shan't let go, not till you've promised to dine with me this evening, Beautiful."

"I can't. I've got a date. I'm dated right up for a month. Be sensible."

"No. I shan't let you go. I'm a persistent man when I want a thing—and I want you more than I've ever wanted anyone, Sweetness. I'll be waiting for you tonight from seven o'clock on, down in the lobby of your hotel, and if you don't turn up, I'm coming up to your apartment and snatch you. Do you hear me?"

"I hear you, and if you don't lower your voice the whole restaurant will hear you—"

"The devil with them! Don't you understand I'm crazy for you?"

Vernon—despite the undeniable ardor of his words—suddenly felt as though a chill wind were blowing on her. She withdrew her hand from Sugar's grasp, just in time to meet the quizzical hostile stare of Myrtle Sarrail—Sugar's wife—who had entered the little restaurant unseen and stood before them accusingly.

Flees From Wife

"Do you mind if I speak very frankly?" said Myrtle Sarrail in a voice of ice to Vernon, there in the small upstairs restaurant of the Goldfish Tavern.

Sugar Sarrail had ignominiously fled, after introducing Vernon to his wife. He had mumbled something about promising to telephone his broker at 2 p. m. and had departed down the stairs.

Myrtle, her mouth drawn tightly in at the corners, had seated herself in the place just vacated by Sugar. She repeated her question.

"Go ahead," Vernon replied quietly.

"You're new to New York, are you not? You're a girl whose parents have made money, and you've plenty of social ambition?"

Vernon steadied herself. She must keep her head. Must deal cautiously with this truculent person.

"Yes. I am new to New York. About having social ambition, as you call it, I'm not at all certain."

"Don't prevaricate. You want to go ahead. You want to make a hit. Probably a big marriage."

Vernon thought, with flushed cheeks: "This is insufferable."

"And you're committing a big blunder right at the start. Going to ruin your chances."

Vernon met her gaze directly. Saw the light of battle in her eyes.

She thought: "How to shield Nan? She came here after her. I must cover it up."

Aloud she answered, gently: "It is kind of you to be interested in me, Mrs. Sarrail, but I'm not a scheming sort of person."

Mrs. Sarrail snapped back angrily: "Yet you come here with a married man? You think that's clever? You think it's going to make you seem smart and fascinating and vampirish?"

"I think nothing of the sort."

"Why, if I'd a mind to, I could ruin you! Don't you understand that, you stupid fool?"

Not even for Nan would she take this. Vernon held her head up proudly.

"I barely know Mr. Sarrail. It was not of my seeking that we met today. He is nothing in the world to me. You can believe it."

Cooking

Piquant Cheese Dishes

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Breakfast Over Station WAAB.

THE POETS and the epicures have done due honor to the infinite variety and piquancy of cheese.

But, for the housewife on a limited budget who searches for healthful menus, cheese is a nourishing necessity as well as a celebrated delicacy.

Cheese fondue, a rarebit or a cheese sandwich make satisfying main courses. Potatoes au gratin, cheese sauce or cheese and crackers for dessert will assure a skimpy menu a full quota of nourishment and just the minerals the family needs for health. The American type of cheese is most adaptable for cooking while Camembert, Liederkranz and Roquefort are famous dessert cheeses.

Here are some delicious ways to use cheese to give economy menus piquant distinction.

BAKED HAM AND CHEESE RABBIT

3 tablespoons shortening
2 tablespoons flour
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup milk
2-3 cup grated store cheese
½ pound cooked drained spaghetti
1½ cups minced cook ham
½ cup buttered bread crumbs

Melt the shortening; add the flour and seasonings, and blend. Gradually add the milk, and cook and stir until the sauce thickens. Remove from the heat; add the cheese, and stir until it melts. In a casserole or baking dish rubbed with butter, arrange alternate layers of the spaghetti, ham and cheese sauce mixture. Cover the top with buttered bread crumbs; and bake in a hot oven, 375 deg. F. for 20 minutes, or until brown on top.

HONEY CHEESE PIE

2 eggs, beaten
1 cup cottage cheese, sieved until fine
½ cup honey (liquid or granulated)
Juice and rind of ½ lemon

Add eggs to cottage cheese and then add honey. Mix well and pour into pan lined with pastry. Sprinkle with a topping of ¼ cup graham cracker crumbs mixed with one tablespoon butter and one tablespoon sugar. Bake in a very moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 25 minutes.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Love Thrives On Obstacles; Scoffs at Wisdom

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE MORNING'S MAIL brings three letters from young women on the same theme.

The writers regard well-to-do young men with only moderate enthusiasm, or none at all, but are swept off their feet by penniless suitors with no prospects.

Two of the young men these girls plan to marry are entirely jobless, living at home on their parents. The third, who has no regular profession or trade, occasionally picks up part-time employment. All three of the girls who wrote me have excellent jobs, and they are willing to marry these prospectless young men and take their chances on being "happy ever after."

The "for-better-or-for-worse" clause in the marriage ceremony, it seems to me, relates more to the woman's point of view than the man's. She seems so much more willing to take a chance.

Is this because women are endowed with a more subtle wisdom in the choosing of a mate than men are? Do they know that "not by bread alone" does marriage prosper?

FEMININE FAMILY HEADS

Lovable men often lack qualities which make for success. You see this on every side. And do women capable of earning substantial salaries turn naturally to men who are less capable? Perhaps there is something in the charge brought against successful women—that they enjoy being the Queen Bee in the hive.

There are enough of such marriages to give some weight to that argument. But in spite of that such unions seem a bit doubtful to me. For a girl with a substantial pay envelope to marry a man with no pay envelope at all, or one that's as flat as tissue paper, seems a good deal of a risk.

Some people do very well with such makeshift marriages. But isn't this complete reversal of the roles of the sexes entirely too much of a makeshift? If a man is capable of getting a job because he has neither trade nor profession, isn't it wiser, in these days of Adult Education and free Vocational Training, for him to learn a trade or fit himself for a profession, before he undertakes the responsibility of marriage?

BAD SITUATION

The patience of a wife who brings home the bacon and cooks it too is apt to wear thin, and the position of a husband who depends on his wife for board, keep and pocket money breeds lack of self-respect.

Again, there is another quality in such a marriage not to be overlooked. Love thrives on opposition. Indeed, it might be called an obstacle race. And a successful girl contemplating marriage to a jobless man, or one with a part-time job, is sure to encounter plenty of opposition from her family and friends. And this very conflict with family and friends may turn the trick.

For love insists on proclaiming its independence. And when love is at high tide, it's no respecter of pocket-books, rank or common prudence.

Many an unwelcome suitor has been snuffed out by a lack of opposition on the part of a girl's family. "As one mother wrote to me in triumph, after she had blocked such a marriage: "I treated him as kindly as the stray cat that hung around the back door, I always gave him something to eat, and passed no mean remark about him. After a while, my daughter saw her mistake."

Opposition is the greatest ally to love. Don't rouse it, if the beloved is undesirable.

'Go On With the Story From Here'

By Nell Brinkley

BOB and Babs are older now. Babs has three grey hairs near the peak of her forehead. And she is very astonished over it. Bob's hair seems to be going away from his forehead like the tide. And he has laughing and worry lines about his eyes. Babs is a little less nymph-like, and Bob ha.. to watch the mashed potatoes in relati.. 'his waistline. But they are very happy, and t' 's seek one another with even a finer feeling than that that stirred them in the first love days.

There are three children now. And it seems strange that there ever was but one. HOW handy Gran'mother does come in. Far, while the youngest sits upon Mother Babs' knee and appropriates her time, Gran'mother watches the manners and the state of cleanliness of the other man of the family and his sister.

What good times they have! There are worrytimes, too, but they are entirely outshone by the good ones. Days on the hillsides in the autumn weather, with the picnic basket and the car. Days at home by the fire in Christmas weather.

Bob wouldn't go back into his bachelor days for the great sums of money that he wis'es he had. And Babs looks at them all—and COUNTS HER WEALTH!

DICKY LEARNS HE, TOO, IS SUMMONED

By ADELE GARRISON

WHY, OH, why, had Lillian chosen to put her summons to Hugh's sick bed in the particular words she had used?

Why could she not have said simply, "I need you," instead of prefixing the sentence with the words, "Hugh wants"—breaking them off significantly and abruptly, and substituting the more innocuous ones?

These were the questions frantically beating upon my brain as I rose quickly to obey her imperative summons. I saw upon Dicky's face as he also rose, a touch of bleak frigidity—he was too proud, too self-controlled, to betray any open discomposure—which told me that the little triumph over his jealousy that I had just achieved had been dashed to the ground by Lillian's inadvertence.

A DELIBERATE BARB

Or was it inadvertence? I knew her impatience of Dicky's jealousy of Hugh.

Her slip of speech had been deliberate. I was sure of that and for an instant hot resentment against her flamed within me.

I smothered my resentment, however, in another second, for two reasons. Both Dicky and I owe Lillian too much to resent anything she may say or do. Then, too, I feared that some unexpected development in Hugh's condition had actuated her summons to me. A query concerning Hugh was upon my lips but I knew better than to irritate Dicky by uttering it. My husband, however, did not repress the words upon his lips.

"May it be permitted to ask what is the nature of the emergency for which my ever-loving spouse's presence is desired?"

His voice was suave, silky, apparently invested with the quintessence of courtesy. But I recognized the cold fury beneath the smooth inflections and was sure that Lillian was also cognizant of his real mood.

"I know no more about it than you do," she said nonchalantly, moving toward the door. "I only know that just now Hugh roused and asked so imperatively that you and Madge come to him, that I could do nothing else but summon you."

If I had not been so perturbed, I could not have resisted a smile at Dicky's manifest astonishment. I never have seen him quite so taken aback. He opened his lips twice to speak and closed them again. Finally he put a question in rough accents.

"What does he want of me? I'm no good at hand-holding and brow-soothing."

Lillian whirled on him with eyes suddenly gleaming.

DICKY'S APOLOGY

"Look here, you bad little boy!" she said. "If mother hears any more of that talk she's going to spank you right before the company. A grievously wounded man, hurt in your service, while hunting your son and your nephew, has asked to speak to you. If you want to refuse his request, say so, but don't compel me to listen to the embellishments."

"I beg both Madge's pardon and yours, Lil," Dicky said with the sudden capitulation to reason which he can stage so fascinatingly when he wishes. "I won't offend again, and I'll come over, of course. Equally of course, I'll behave while I'm in the sick room. Will that do?"

He was speaking to Lillian, but he was looking at me, and something, despite my resentment for the things he had said, I managed a reassuring smile at him.

Lillian, however, was not to be placated so easily.

"It will have to do," she said grudgingly. "But see to it that you don't throw any spasms, no matter what Hugh asks of you. I haven't the slightest idea what he wants. He may figure he's going to pass out, and wants you to be executor of a will leaving his estate for the care of homeless cats. Or he may want to leave his belongings over to Madge and ask her to put flowers on his grave once a week. Or—"

Fashion Flashes

THE MEDIEVAL STYLES of the season are a boon to brides. Nothing could be more regal than a medieval wedding gown of silver silk lame, with a molded bodice and a billowing skirt ending in a train, the slim waist encircled by a jewelled belt. A train length silk tulle veil is worn with this one, with a shorter over-veil covering the face, worn over a high cone-shaped cap of silver lame.

The Best Suit

Though 10 tricks are needed for game in a major suit, and only nine tricks at notrump, it is usually better to play a hand for game in hearts or spades than in notrump.

That is, provided the hands of declarer and dummy, together, contain eight cards or more of the trump suit.

Then, even if the defenders have a strong suit, they cannot win many tricks with that suit while the declarer has trumps with which to ruff it.

At notrump the defendants' strong suit may be run off, one card after the other.

Notrump should, of course, be preferred when declarer and dummy are so strong in every suit that there is little danger of having a strong, long, suit established against them.

It never hurts, however, to explore the possibilities of playing the hand at spades and hearts, by bidding those suits whenever possible and finding out whether or not partner can support one of them.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | ♠K3 ♡1964 ◇AQ7 ♣K852 | |
| ♠10865 ♡Q75 ◇796 ♣J106 | North West East South | ♠J7 ♡A2 ◇K10832 ♣Q943 |
| | ♠AQ942 ♡K1083 ◇54 ♣A7 | |

South bid one spade. West passed, and North bid two notrump. This bid, which shows distributed strength amounting to 2½ honor tricks or more, is forcing to game.

East passed, and South, though his heart suit was not quite up to the requirements for a biddable suit, decided to show this suit. He bid three hearts, leaving North the option of going to three notrump if he wished.

But North, with four trumps, preferred the major suit, and four hearts became the final contract.

The game was made without great difficulty. West opened the club suit, which was won by the King in dummy. The nine of hearts was led, and East and South played low cards. West winning with the Queen.

Another club fell to South's Ace, and he led the eight of hearts. East taking the Ace. East continued clubs, and South ruffed. Now, before drawing the last trump, South took the King and Ace of spades, and ruffed a small spade with dummy's heart Jack.

The King of hearts drew West's last trump, the Queen and nine of spades were taken, and then South attempted the diamond finesse.

The finesse lost to the King, but the 10th trick for North-South was won by the diamond Ace, giving them game.

Venetian Ensemble

THE VENETIAN RULERS inspired the creation of an evening ensemble of titian bronze, lamé lined with rust velvet. The wrap is voluminous and is lined with velvet.

In contrast is a demure black dinner dress with a flesh colored lace top, exactly like the lace paper on a valentine.

Hobby to Relieve Frayed Nerves

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

RECENTLY I attended an exposition where several booths were devoted to "hobbies."

There were collections of stamps, rare editions of books, model airplanes, unusual flowers and snakes, mechanical devices, and a hundred other exhibits. Hobby shows are indeed fascinating.

Hobbies have always been popular. Hardly one of us has been so unfortunate as to escape the cultivation of at least one. But it is only within recent years that the medical profession has become interested in this valuable method of relaxation. Some special interest, fad or hobby will make one forget his worries and problems. Lack of diversion often is the underlying cause of "nerves," the "jitters" and mental depression. Diverting the mind to some new interest will overcome that dejected feeling.

RELIEVE TENSION

Many nerve specialists now claim that if everyone of us had a hobby there would be fewer nervous breakdowns. The tired business man should have some pet pursuit to take his mind off his work and thus to relieve nervous tension.

Healthful hobbies not only provide much pleasure and relaxation, but they are instructive as well. The choice of a hobby depends entirely upon the individual. Some find interest in books, paintings, photography, gardening, traveling, exploring, modeling, canoeing, horse-back riding, carpentry. But these are only a few of the many, many fascinating hobbies from which to choose.

Many a hobby can be traced to an early childhood interest that has increased with the years. It is wise for the parents to encourage the pursuit of a special interest. If it does nothing else it insures the child a valuable and pleasant pastime. A hobby is of special value to the "only child," or the child who is irritable and difficult to please. It will occupy his mind, keep him alert, satisfied and out of mischief.

MAKE IT SIMPLE

The encouragement of a hobby need not mean the expenditure of a large sum of money. In the case of the child, no matter how rich you may be, it is advisable to begin with something quite simple and enlarge upon it as the child grows older.

Never attempt to force a hobby upon the child. Let its appeal develop naturally. A special diversion of this sort will help to lessen the "humdrum" of the daily routine. It is well to remember the old proverb, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Do not confine your attention to your serious daily work. Find a hobby. There are many entertaining and fascinating ways of spending leisure moments which will add much to your life. Try to locate one.

NEW MASCARA STAYS ON FOR SIX WEEKS

Run-Proof, Though Not a Dye

By ADELINE GOULD

HERE'S REAL NEWS. A mascara that you simply cannot afford to be without because it actually does what no other cosmetic of its kind can do—is our pet discovery of the month.

Its claim to greatness lies in the fact that it is indelible—its permanency guaranteed to last six weeks. However, it is not a dye and therefore cannot possibly hurt either eyes or lashes.

This lash darkener is a scientifically compounded liquid which not only contains a new ingredient to encourage the growth of the lashes, but gives a wonderfully long, silky lustrous effect.

Not being a dye, it merely "coats" the lashes, thus doing away with any possibility of the mascara penetrating the roots. As proof of its purity it bears the stamp of approval of the Board of Health of New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

It is smart-proof, run-proof and lasts through laughter and tears. Neither can it be felt by the most sensitive eyes—even if it gets in.

Besides its beauty value and its safe-to-use approval, it is the opinion of this department that it has still another basic merit. When you consider that our eyelashes replace themselves every sixty days, isn't it a wise plan to use a preparation which makes application necessary only once during that time?

The new growth is then left free to develop untouched by mascara and cosmetics, except, of course, for the first and only application.

If you prefer a naturally flattering effect to a conspicuous one, you don't want to use several eye cosmetics, you will find this lotion admirably suitable.

Young things adore the demure, subtly glamorous look it gives, and we believe that admirers will approve of it too, because it hasn't that obvious, artificial appeal. And older women who demand a naturally flattering effect for faded or lack-lustre lashes will sing its praises also.

To learn the name of this lash darkener which makes application necessary only once in every five or six weeks, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

Question—My problem concerns the eyes. Lately all my eyelashes have fallen out. I have been applying white vaseline nightly and brushing the few I have left. Also I have recently been treating my eyes to a boric acid solution. Do you know of a way to promote their growth?
JEAN R., Newton.

Answer—First of all, find out what has caused your eyelashes to fall out. Granulated lids are often responsible for loss of lashes and should be treated by a reliable, reputable eye specialist. Eye strain and various diseases will also prevent beautiful lashes. It's slow work, I warn you, to promote the growth of eyelashes. However, it can be done. Gently brushing the lashes with a tiny brush helps sometimes. There are a number of good eyelash growers on the market. Send this department a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the names of these preparations.

Question—I am seventeen and have very fine, blonde hair. It is very thin and I have been troubled by falling hair and excessive dandruff. I have tried olive oil, sweet oil and vaseline without success. Could you please give me a bit of advice on how to stop this condition.
Worried, Milford

Answer—If taken in the early stages, dandruff can be corrected easily. It is only when inflammation has set in and the general condition of the health is poor, that dandruff is hard to overcome. The first step in the treatment of dandruff is to cleanse it thoroughly and keep it in that condition. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for our dandruff leaflet. This leaflet contains a medicated shampoo and a dry sulphur ointment. This is as fine an ointment as you will find and if made correctly and applied properly will check dandruff permanently.

Hunt Clubs Conduct Trials for Annual Fall Meet

By BETTY ALDEN

ALMOST EVERY Hunt Club in eastern Massachusetts is conducting trials and carefully selecting their representative teams to compete in the annual fall hunt and hound trials and hunters' trials to be held October 30 on the rolling fields of Brackenside, Mrs. Augustus F. Goodwin's estate in Hamilton, at 10 a. m. . . .

Each year the picked teams of the various clubs assemble to compete for the individual and team prizes which are the pre-eminent honors in Massachusetts hunting circles . . .

MRS. WILLIAM O. CLARK

During the past few years Myopia, Hamilton's home club, and, incidentally the oldest hunt club in New England, has won the greatest number of points and carried off most of the trophies, but members of every other club will pause in the careful schooling of their entries to tell you that the condition cannot continue and that their club will win this fall . . .

Yesterday afternoon members of the Millwood Hunt Club had their tryouts to select their best entries for the Myopia meet . . . They held their trials at George Lamson's estate in Framingham Centre and whether they were riding or not, practically every one connected with the Millwood was seen wandering around the course or taking a peek into the stables . . .

The Winthrop Pyemonts, accompanied by their little girl and her pet puppie; Pat Bird, most fallish and chic in a plaid skirt with a soft brown jacket; and the latter's sister, Betty Bird Clark and her husband William O. Clark, were all there . . .

It was such a beautiful afternoon that most of the spectators took advantage of the warm October sun and sat on running boards or on the grass instead of in their cars as they usually do at Millwood affairs . . .

Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Nat Bowditch, Mrs. William Wheatley with her little granddaughter, Joan Balch, and her three sons, Dean, Paul and Jeff Wheatley who were schooling their hunters for the qualifying tests; Mr. Reggie Bird, Mrs. William B. Long, George Lamson, John Hopewell and Mrs. Frank Hopewell, Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner Fiske, Harold Willis and Dr. Warburton . . .

Many Bostonians Attend Ball

FOR YEARS the annual autumn ball in Tuxedo Park, one of New York's wealthiest suburbs, has been considered the official opening of the debutante season of the metropolitan district and always serves as the formal presentation of the girls who live in Tuxedo Park . . . This year nearly every prominent debutante of New York, as well as many of their sister debs of Boston, Washington and Philadelphia, were present and specially honored were Miss Eve Mortimer and Miss Helen Wilmerding, both daughters of socially prominent Tuxedo Park families . . .

The date of the ball was advanced this year to coincide with the Harvard-Army game, which gave hostesses a double excuse for having gay house parties for the week-end . . . Practically every residence in Tuxedo Park was filled with week-end guests and many Bostonians were in the cars which whisked their occupants up the river to West Point for the game, then back to one of the several large tea dances and on to a fashionable dinner party before drawing up to the portals of the Tuxedo Club for the ball . . .

Leita Amory, daughter of the John Austin Amorys of Needham, was the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Amory but she attended the ball with a group of young people who went on from a large dinner party given for Miss Eve Mortimer by her grandmother, Mrs. Henry Morgan Tilford . . . May Gilbert, daughter of Mrs. E. Fenton Gilbert of Brookline, was another Boston deb at the dinner, as was Pauline du Pont, who will come out in Boston under the wing of her aunt, Mrs. B. Francis Crowninshield . . . Nancy Leiter, who gave North Shore society such a big evening with her party last week-end, was a guest at the ball of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Mitchell, and Linda Collins was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherford who entertained a group of young Mayfairites at the dance . . .

Luncheon to Honor Newlyweds

AMONG THE MANY parties which dot the social calendar for next week-end, before and after the Harvard-Dartmouth game, is the luncheon which Mr. and Mrs. Channing Wells are giving before the game in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George Rowland (Mary Phinney), a bridal couple of last June . . .

• • •

Now that Olivia Morgan is sporting her diamond ring in public, everyone wants to know when she and Alfred Hallowell are to stage their day of days and the newly-engaged couple are promising their friends that it will be in the spring . . .

Alfred is a member of the English faculty at Harvard and unlike most of his brothers and sisters who followed their parents, the N. Penrose Hallowells, to New York to live, he has continued to reside here, near his heart's desire and, of course, his job . . .

Mrs. Laurence Morgan, Olivia's mother, is the newly elected president of the Parents' League . . . The Morgans gave a large tea for the engaged pair yesterday afternoon at their Dedham home with a group of last year's debs presiding at the tea tables, including Jessie Fay, Sue Dalton, Margaret Hallowell of New York, Marjorie Saltonstall, Priscilla Weld, Anne and June Donald and Ethel du Pont . . .

Mrs. A. L. West Movius was the week-end house guest of the J. Lewis Bremers at the latters' seaside home in Cohasset.

Mrs. Bancroft Entertains

MRS. HUGH BANCROFT will bring a large party of guests to the opening performance of "There's Wisdom in Women" at the Colonial Theater this evening in honor of her daughter Jane's debut on the professional stage.

Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Revere, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip K. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Rogerson, Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hart, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nealy.

Other guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whittemore, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott R. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. E. Merrill Darling, Mr. Frank Vossey, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hewitt, Mr. Dana Baird, Miss Frances Alley, Mr. and Mrs. D. Jackson Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. deCourcy Perera and Miss Eleanor Herbert.

FIXER TOLD OF CAR PARKED BY MAILBOX

"THE TROUBLE FIXER"

Public Service Department, Boston Evening American

This department has been installed as a public service for Boston Evening American readers. It will endeavor to solve problems and fix troubles dealing with city, state or public utility services. Requests must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests, nor matters of a purely private nature can be considered.

Ironic and pointed is the letter from P. M. of Hanover street, Boston, who writes:

"It is very considerate of the postal authorities of Boston to have placed in Post Office square of this city a letter box for the autoist. It is well-built, and perhaps would answer the purpose if there were less cars parked in front of it and on the side of it.

"Perhaps the owner of the car that is left in front of the said letter box is its inventor!

"In fact, I believe that the car is parked in front of the letter box to show those who may have intentions of mailing a letter the way the autoist should drive up his car to reach the box.

"You can see this parked car between the hours of 7 p. m. and 7 a. m."

To say the least, Mr. P. M. is artful in presenting his plea. While he does not specifically ask this department to adjust the matter, "The Trouble Fixer" can take a hint and will investigate.

M. B. H., of Ericsson street, Allston, sends in the following:

"I take this opportunity to thank you for the sign erected at Ericsson street, Allston. This is an unacrepted street so I guess there is no chance of having any work done to it. But I do hope the authorities will resurface Lincoln street, which is a public highway, heavily travelled. Again I thank you for your interest and for what you have done."

Hartwell--Lloyd

Miss Sarah Lloyd Is Bride of Mead Hartwell in New York

MR. MEAD HARTWELL, son of Dr. Harry F. Hartwell of Newton, was married Saturday afternoon at the Church of the Epiphany on Lexington avenue in New York city, to Miss Sarah Elizabeth Lloyd, daughter of Major William H. Lloyd, of the medical corps, U. S. army and Mrs. Lloyd.

Owing to a recent death in the bride's family only the families and a few intimate friends were present at the reception which was held at the home of her uncle, Mr. Charles Butler.

Mrs. George W. Lermond of Fort Benning, Ga., sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and Mrs. Joseph Hartwell of Weston, Miss Mary Mitchell of Bronxville, N. Y., Miss Jeanette Limerick of Baltimore and Miss Suzanne W. Shepard of Washington, D. C., were the bridesmaids.

Joseph Hartwell acted as his brother's best man. The ushers were Edward Faulkner of Keene, N. H., Roland Maycock of New York, Courtlandt Van Dyck Hubbard of Walpole, N. H., and John Munay of Boston.

The bride is a granddaughter of the late Benjamin F. Butler of New York and a great granddaughter of Dr. Marvin R. Vincent of the Union Theological Seminary and of Major General Robert McAllister. She attended the Misses Eastman's school in Washington and was graduated from Wheaton College last June.

Mr. Hartwell prepared for college at Milton Academy and was graduated from Harvard College with the class of 1934. He is a member of the Spee kers Club and the Harvard Club of Boston.

After their wedding trip Mr. Hartwell and his bride will make their home at 50 Cedar Lane way, on Beacon Hill.

HOLLAND

BOSTON Is Still Tops As Stage's Guide

By GEORGE HOLLAND

The infallibility of Boston as a theatrical barometer for New York, discounted widely except by the very shrewdest of the theater's sages, is being proved for what I hope will be once and for all this strange early season.

Three "musicals" which are turning customers away in the Metropolis enjoyed capacity business here. They are, in the order of their appearance here, "At Home Abroad," "Jubilee," and "Porgy and Bess."

George Holland (at end point) on the Crosby Gates "Othello" and "Macbeth," and as recently as a week or so ago on Philip Barry's "Bright Star."

These productions were given painstaking, and "Bright Star" was peopled by uncommonly fine major actors headed by Lee Tracy, Julie Haydon and Jean Dixon. Each of these players had a motion picture following. But "Bright Star" attracted a mere $7400 to the Plymouth till in seven performances here. Boston did not like the play.

Well, New York did not like it, either. It had a brilliant premiers last Tuesday at the fashionable Empire Theater, with $2500 worth of opening-night cash to start the play off swimmingly. It sank Saturday night.

* * *

The week's four major casualties were Sidney Howard's adaptation of the famous novel, "Paths of Glory"; "Mulrooney" folded after a three weeks' run. Accompanying "Bright Star" to the storehouse Saturday night were John Van Druten's "Most of the Game," "Sweet Mystery of Life," which was produced by the very reverend Herman Shumlin, and "The Children's Hour."

* * *

The immediate effect of the season's litter will be another change in attitude of the Chester-owners in New York. For the first time in years, guarantees were being demanded and received for the rental of theaters in the Times Square environs. This has been a hardship on producers, who are obliged this season also to pay actors for rehearsals.

Hollywood Comes to Town

Lita Grey Chaplin is one of the stars in the Hollywood company of "Life Begins At 8:40," popular musical revue which returns to Boston and the Shubert Theater tonight.

New Revue at the Park

"Tune in America" is the new revue at Minsky's Park.

With plenty of melody and still more humor, the new musical extravaganza, set in the lavish Minsky manner, more than lives up to its title.

Bobby Pegrim, clever dance director, staged the production, which features the favorite of burlesque fans, Margie Hart, as his lovely star.

Margie is known as one of America's most beautiful show girls, and sharing honors with her in "Tune In America" is Elsa Lang, one of the best singers in burlesque.

The sensational dance numbers are presented by Yama Troy, who combines her Oriental charms with some hotcha numbers that had the patrons at the opening show demanding more and more.

As for the comedy end of the show, it couldn't be in better hands. "Snuffles" Le Van, returning to burlesque after a two years' contract in Hollywood, brought down the house. Steve Mills, a dialectician with a different line; Phil Silvers, Floyd Halliday and Murray Green round out the brigade of Minsky gloom chasers.

Ann Harding Is Assigned Lead in New Film

By JERRY HOFFMAN

(Pinch-Hitting for Louella O. Parsons, Motion Picture Editor, Universal

(Copyright 1935, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, Oct. 21—Some time before "The Indestructible Mrs. Talbot" was sold to Paramount, Ann Harding had read P. J. Wolfson's story.

She liked it well enough to ask Radio studio executives to buy it for her. Radio's bid wasn't high enough and the yarn went to Paramount. Ann was disconsolate, insisting that they had missed a grand opportunity for a perfect vehicle.

Soooo, this week when Paramount approached Radio to borrow Irene Dunne to play with Ann in "The Old Maid," Radio executives coyly broached the idea of selling them "The Indestructible Mrs. Talbot." It's favor for favor now and everyone's happy, particularly Ann Harding, who starts immediately in the Wolfson story in her home studio before going to Paramount.

* * *

Ever since "Sequoia" Director Chester Franklin has become Hollywood's authority on animals and their behavior. He is going to Paramount when "Getaway" is completed to make "Wilderness," a story of a dog and a horse whose friendship will rival that of the puma and deer.

Meanwhile, Chester is going through amusing experiences finding a dog for "Getaway." One, finally chosen as ideal, turned around and bit the director! The next day another came along. The dog's trainer asked for a script.

"Why?" inquired Franklin. "Oh," replied the dog's owner, "We always study our parts three days ahead."

P. S. The dog got the job.

Chatter in Hollywood: Of course, when Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. made his remarks about not coming back to Hollywood he was completely absorbed with Gertrude Lawrence in London. That's thoroughly cold—and now Doug has met Merle Oberon.

Merle seems to have quite a lot, paraphrasing Mary Livingstone, of what girls haven't got. In England Doug rushed Merle and now he is coming back to America and to Hollywood for a visit. Some one else should join Merle in New York because Doug, Merle and David Niven may need a fourth at bridge.

Snapshots of Hollywood

BILL POWELL taking ice cream to JEAN HARLOW, who has the flu; MADGE EVANS trying to win SAMUEL GOLDWYN'S trophy for the biggest fish caught at Ensenada; ANN SOTHERN leading with a 21-pound yellowtail; PEGGY WOOD happy over the arrival of her little boy from New York.

A serious discussion of "Hamlet" held by JOSEPHINE HUTCHINSON and LESLIE HOWARD about Jo's playing Ophelia on the New York stage; EDWARD G ROBINSON back from New York, owner of three race horses; STU ERWIN completely gone on radio distance reception, got China today in time to hear Tess at 4:40 today. See you tomorrow!

GENERAL MOTORS ACCEPTANCE CORPORATION

Reduces time payment costs on new cars

With a new 6% plan

GMAC announces today a new, economical way to buy any new General Motors car from General Motors dealers all over the United States.

It's the plan you've been waiting for—a plan you can understand at a glance. It is far simpler and more economical than any other automobile time payment arrangement you've ever tried.

Actually as simple as A, B, C—this new plan provides for convenient time payments of the unpaid balance on your car—including cost of insurance and a financing cost of 6%. This represents a considerable reduction in the cost of financing car purchases. It is not 6% interest, but simply a convenient multiplier anyone can use and understand.

SIMPLE AS A, B, C

A—TAKE YOUR UNPAID BALANCE

B—ADD COST OF INSURANCE

C—MULTIPLY BY 6%—12 months' plan

[One-half of one per cent per month for periods more or less than 12 months]

That's your whole financing cost. No extras. No service fees. No other charges.

In some states a small legal documentary fee is required*

Nothing is added in the way of so-called service or carrying charges. There are no extras. Simply a straightforward, easy-to-understand transaction.

This single step brings the world's finest cars within reach of thousands who have long needed new cars. When you buy a new Cadillac or Buick, Chevrolet or Pontiac, Oldsmobile or La Salle, on this new plan, you actually save money!

And finally—buyers under this new plan receive an insurance policy in the General Exchange Insurance Corporation which protects them against Fire, Theft and Accidental Damage to their cars.

Make your own comparisons

To understand the real economy of the new GMAC plan, compare it with other finance plans on a dollars and cents basis. And be sure to include similar insurance protection. Further details are available now from dealers in General Motors Cars.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

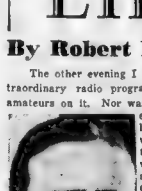
The other evening I heard a perfectly extraordinary radio program. There were no amateurs on it. Nor was it a combination of ex-hams doing their best, lads and lassies who once had wowed the customers in vaudeville at the Palace and on the old Orpheum circuit, back when Woodrow Wilson was governor of New Jersey.



ROBERT E. ROGERS

No, neither of these. They were what I might call semi-professionals, men and women who had been trained to sing, who had held down real jobs at small money, and who thursted to hear the radio magnates say—as in the scriptures — "friend, go up higher!"

They came from small town church choirs, for instance, that sure-fire source of good voices and light opera careers in the good old days. Does any lady or gentleman in the audience remember when the amateur "Pinafore" companies were recruited from the church choirs and subsequently went into The Bostonians and similar classy organizations?

Answer to the Prayers Of Economical Sponsors

The man who invented amateur night on the radio is probably fervently mentioned in the prayers of all broadcasting companies, not to mention their sponsors. Major Bowes, was it? I seem to have heard so. The fact that everybody rushed to imitate him and provide programs of entertainment made up of youngsters hungry for fame from all over the United States would seem to indicate that his idea was a winner.

It takes you back to the dear dead days when radio was new and people tumbled over themselves to talk into a microphone for the sheer novelty of the thing. I remember on several occasions, back in the very earliest twenties, taking the long cold jaunt by street car out to the modest station on the edge of the Tufts College grounds to give a little educational spiel or to take part in a Boston Drama League play-reading, one of the very earliest examples of that kind of radio entertainment on record.

And for years, as it seems to me, radio entertainment was largely provided free of charge by earnest amateurs. Those economical days seem to have returned, and the sponsor, who has been mulcted plenty in recent years, can now sit back as patron of a sometimes amusing entertainment without having to pay large sums for professional talent.

Expensive Talent Seems Still to Have Edge

I suggest, however, that the professional and expensive talent still seems to have the best of it. I will admit that an amateur entertainment may be pretty amusing, often because of the efforts of the professional interlocutor, but the sum total of the program is usually more amusing than the individual bits.

The thing can be pretty pathetic sometimes. The home talent girl who is so scared that her voice throbs and wavers and shakes always makes me feel a bit sad for her, particularly if they ring the gong on her in the midst of a sentimental phrase. And you never know, when an "imitator" is announced, whether he is going to be terrible or merely tolerable.

And Don't Forget the Gent Who Still Sings "Trees"

The boy soprano is frequently more popular with the old folks at home than with the non-paying public. And the lad who plays "Swanee River" on the musical saw. Or the black-face trio harmonizing "Old Man River" in mixed bass and baritone.

That is why the contest I heard the other evening between—not amateurs—but trained entertainers who had never succeeded in making the Big Time seemed to me pretty delectable. They knew what they were doing. They were well trained.

The amateurs are a sign that sponsored radio is looking for places to save money on. And that is the beginning of the end. Are we on our way back again to cheap volunteer programs? Can the advertisers stand the gaff any longer? One can only warn these sponsors who are jumping at the amateur programs that if the present system doesn't produce the kind of entertainment we have been accustomed to, we won't care very much whether government takes over radio or not.

Ames Debut Hailed by Critics

TRIUMPH FOR WIDOW

The mezzo soprano voice of Maurice Ames was hailed by critics today after her enormously successful concert debut at York's Town Hall.

The widow of Frederick Lothrop Ames was applauded generously at the conclusion of each number.

It was only after she had been recalled time and again and had been forced to render three encores at the end of her program that the audience consented to allow her to leave the stage.

At the intermission floral tributes covered the top of the piano. Frank Bibb, her accompanist, shared applause with the artist when she sang "A Sea Poem," composed by him as part of her final group.

The lyric quality of Mrs. Ames' voice was most noticeable in the opening group of songs by Brahms and Straus. Here the upper register particularly was praised.

Her dramatic talents were demonstrated in the Verdi Aria "O Don Fatale" from Don Carlos, Carl Busch's "The Eagle" and Mary Turner Salter's "The Cry of Rachel."

An exacting program including German lieder, old and modern French songs, the operatic aria, Scandinavian song and a group in English, made up her program.

Her encores were in German, French and English.

Mrs. Ames met Ames in January 1928, and was married to him 20 days later.

Ames, society aviator and Harvard graduate, was killed three years ago in an aviation crash.

Mrs. Ames studied opera and was assistant teacher to Adolph Muehlmann of Glenn Dillard Gunn's school of music in Chicago.

She makes her home in Commonwealth avenue.

$10,000 Fund Given Father Ahern

Weston College is to have an unsurpassed seismological station through the presentation of $10,000 to the Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S. J., to celebrate the 25th anniversary of his ordination.

Hundreds of friends of the noted Jesuit scientist and lecturer wished to present him with a fund to finance a year of study abroad.

Father Ahern refused, however consenting to a public celebration of his silver jubilee on condition the fund would be used for the purchase of new seismological equipment for Weston College.

Judge John E. Swift, head of the committee to raise the fund made the presentation.

Others present included Monsignor Richard J. Haberlin, representing Cardinal O'Connell; Senator David I. Walsh and Dr. and Mrs. Shapley.

Others who participated in raising the fund were guests at the exercises. They included Ex-Governor and Mrs. Frank G. Allen, Patrick T. Campbell, Mrs. Alan T. Fuller, Lieutenant-Colonel Paul G. Kirk, Rabbi Harry Levi, Mayor Frederick Mansfield of Boston, P. A. O'Connell, John Shepard 2d, Judge Charles Donahue and Frank G. Comerford.

Brookline Disputes Aerial Fire Alarm

Fire started by burning leaves deposited on the roof of the large barn of Silas Peavy estate at Marshall street and Longwood avenue, Brookline, today, was soon under control.

But stories concerning the manner of the fire-discovery were not so easily squelched.

Widespread was the report an aviator had noticed the blaze, and rallied down to the police in a radio-equipped cruising car.

Brookline police insisted no cruising car could pick up a message sent from a plane.

And the fire department declared scornfully the stories were fabrications and had been circulating for a week.

GIRLS SEE CRIMSON

REGINA VASCHAK FLORENCE MAYHEW

Smoking girls retaliated to the Harvard Guide book's ban on coeds (as reflected from the date sting by burning the editor in effigy. The best effigy they could find was the poor old bunny. And Regina Vaschak and Florence Mayhew, Simmons students, get a great kick out of the hanging ceremony.

DR. LOWELL'S BOOM

G.O.P. Chiefs Surprised by Fuller

While President-Emeritus A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard remained silent today on the suggestion that he be the Republican candidate for governor, Speaker Leverett Saltonstall of the House announced himself as not disturbed.

To that Saltonstall, who recently announced his candidacy, it would be a surprise if Dr. Lowell would consent to run.

The suggestion that the former Harvard head, now approaching his 79th year, enter the fight was put forth by former Governor Alvan T. Fuller.

"I have always had the greatest respect and admiration for President Lowell of Harvard," said Saltonstall. "I would be very much surprised if he would be willing to entertain the suggestion that he be a candidate for Governor."

"IT'S INTERESTING"

Representative Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Beverly, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senate, said:

"I think it is a very interesting suggestion, but I am not tying up with anyone for governor. I reserve its rise or fall on my own merit."

Former State Senator James E. Cavanagh of Everett, who also seeks the Republican nomination for the United States Senate, remarked:

"President Lowell has all the qualifications to make a great governor. He reminds one of former Governor Samuel W. McCall.

"Unlike McCall, however, he lacks political experience and the appeal to the average voter which is essential if Governor Curley is to be defeated."

District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex County, another avowed candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, said:

"I have no comment to make."

LOWELL SILENT

"Mr. Lowell declines to comment" was the terse message given by the secretary of the Harvard president-emeritus to reporters who called at his residence, 171 Marlborough street, Back Bay.

Lowell was suggested as the dark Republican candidate for governor by Fuller, who refused to commit himself to any of the three men who have announced their intention of seeking the party nomination.

Questioned regarding the national Republican picture the former governor expressed a distinct preference for Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas.

"He looks good to me at this distance," Fuller stated.

DI STASIO TRIAL PUT OFF WEEK

Election of withdrawal of Attorney William Schaetzen as counsel for Dr. Irwin of Frank Di Stasio, 30, of Revere, for the torch slaying of Daniel M. Crowley, freight handler was today postponed a week.

Schaetzen will continue to represent Di Stasio's son, Anthony, 20 also accused in the torch murder.

The new attractive wife, Julia, waiting his appearance, rushed to the cage and kissed him as he was seated in the courtroom.

Father and son walked different paths into the courthouse to begin separate battles to escape death in the electric chair.

The state charges the plot to murder the freight handler was originated by the father to collect an insurance policy, and that the son aided him.

SHOE INDUSTRY

Future CONSIDERED Cheerful

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Further advances in general leather lines fail to deter buyers in their activities and indications are sizable orders are either on hand or expected in the near future.

That is the summation of affairs in the current Shoe & Leather Reporter leads to the conclusion leather prices will reflect more closely upswings in raw cost in the future. At the same time, conversations the writer has had with well-posted trade observers in the Boston district leads to the conclusion the inventory situation and the industry is very strong.

* * *

It is pointed out that suppliers of leather, from raw hides to finished shoes, are operating behind orders. Tanners are rushed to fill orders for upper and sole leather merchants and they, in turn, are lagging in deliveries to manufacturers, who face an insistent demand from retailers. This strong situation has prompted some shoe buyers to commit themselves in a financial way in the last 10 days. According to the Shoe & Leather Reporter, indications are for decided upward revisions in spring and summer lines.

* * *

Notebook: The cost and selling price situation is tightening so rapidly that we will hazard a guess that chain shoe store manufacturers will soon lift prices . . . So much for the business angle . . . All this, it seems, must receive attention marketwise . . . Shares in shoe concerns and leather merchants are worth close analysis . . . Volume and price favor them . . . Fully offsetting any argument that profit margins are not what they might be . . . The shoe and leather shares look "right."

* * *

The stock market is showing signs of working higher through the effort of investment buying. Low priced issues, selected groups and individual specialties that have idly marked time for months, as the primadonnas of the list acted up, started moving forward. They decided if sustained, should prove sufficient to keep the market bended higher. Though we want to note right now that this type of stock usually furnishes the windup of a bull swing.

* * *

Shorts: The auto show opening two weeks away is stimulating last minute efforts of buyers to take their favorites some place . . . Copper shares are not behaving as apply one that way talk is fading . . . But with headlines telling of night and day activity in British munitions plants each day may not yet be done . . . Packing shares, low priced and seasonal favorites, continue to look higher . . . Shorts met with sudden death in their occasional rallies.

British Gold

Ohio Oil

Ohio Oil Co. declared a dividend of 15 cents, payable December 14 to stock of record October 31, and June 15, last, the company paid a similar dividend on the common.

RADIO ROLE FOR JOAN BENNETT

By N. F. T.

Followers of the fast-gaining ground "Radio Theatre" hour (WNAC) which shifted from Sunday afternoon to Monday night airing not so long ago, will be quite likely to relish the "Merely Mary Ann" adaptation due this evening between 9 and 10 o'clock.

Said setting should score for the reason that it is to feature blonde Joan Bennett, youngest of the three beautiful actresses who are daughters of Richard Bennett himself a great American actor. Not forgetting the fact that the lively comedy-drama itself is one of the brightest ever Broadway theatergoers acclaimed. It is the first full length drama Joan has undertaken.

N. F. T.

Guy Lombardo will salute radio's newest dramatic star, Leslie Howard, during the Royal Canadians' "Lombardo Road" program (WNAC) tonight, from 8:00 to 8.30 p.m. He will play Howard's favorite popular number, "Accent on Youth." Each week Guy features a favorite song of a prominent celebrity.

* * *

Late this afternoon, 4:45 to be exact, brings a bit of broadcasting by Dr. Frederick N Sperry President of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing. His topic (WNAC) will treat the development of equipment making it easier for the deaf to indulge and enjoy the major radio spectacles being enrried over coast to coast air waves.

OATH LAW FOES PLAN DRIVE

While Middlesex County American Legionnaires were pledging support to the teachers' oath law, a group was being formed today at Harvard, pledged to its repeal.

The group is the student-faculty continuations committee, organized as a result of Professor Kirtley Mather's speech at New Lecture Hall October 8.

Made up of undergraduates, instructors and professors, the committee will circularize students of Greater Boston colleges, in an effort to weld a unified opposition to the law.

The action of the Legionnaires, on the other hand, was the result of a meeting of the Middlesex Legion Council at Framingham, during which a demand was made that the law be retained.

Just before they passed the resolution, J. Waston Tuttle, blind legislator, addressed the meeting and asked that no restriction be placed on religious freedom.

General Motors' New Finance Plan

A General Motors Acceptance Corporation 5 per cent plan, which officials say is the lowest cost national plan for the purchase of new cars, will be announced by General Motors dealers tomorrow.

A statement issued by the company says the plan eliminates "carrying charges," "service charges" and this like.

Officials point out that under the new General Motors plan, prospective buyers take the unpaid balance due, add to this the amount of insurance, multiply the result by 6 per cent, and the resultant figure is the entire cost of financing the unpaid balance and insurance for 12 months.

The General Motors plan is being offered also on Chevrolet cars and trucks, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick, La Salle and Cadillac cars.

Probe Reveals:

Political Trickery Delays Relief

(This is the fourteenth in a series on the Federal relief breakdown in Massachusetts.)

By JOHN H. NOONAN and ALAN C. FRAZER

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

There is magic in money—political magic.

If you have a five-bill on-dollar fund, and you spend too much of it in 1935, there isn't going to be enough left for 1936, a big political year.

But if you spend slowly at first, the fund will stretch out well on toward election.

Our investigation of federal relief convinced us that—aside from breakdowns due to faulty relief machinery—officials at Washington were delaying for political ends.

Our investigation indicated that the goal which they had set for their program would not be reached until after the first of the year as a matter of political strategy. We so stated more than two weeks ago.

Now from Wash ngton come expert predictions, based on the relief officials' own statistics of progress, that their goal cannot be reached until mid January.

Money Bags Tight

It now appears reasonably certain that the moneybags will not be opened wide until after the first of the year, when the projects will be started going "full blast." Thus when the political campaign gets underway in the open, the politicians will be able to "point with pride" to a relief program in actual operation on all sides.

Meanwhile publicity material coils from the relief bureau multigraphs, designed to act as a sedative to blind the people to the delay.

In actual fact, the failure of the relief program up to this time reaches proportions which may properly be labeled colossal.

The only way in which it can be explained is to assign a political reason.

If that is hard to swallow, remember that there is only so much money to be spent. The projects cannot last indefinitely. And the later they are started, the nearer to election they are going to extend.

Is anything being done to rush things in the face of the existing collapse?

As great as the crisis is—with the bureaucrats short of their goal by a margin incredibly great Administrator Harry Hopkins is still on vacation, journeying home afterd from the Pacific by way of Panama posing for photographers and fishing on the way

Williams Flounders

The chief is away from the helm, leaving his assistant, Aubrey Williams, in command, and Williams is the man who recently admitted that he is floundering around on the Youth Program—a subject which we will again take up in a later article.

Of course, at key points, large sums are being poured out to impress the people with relief measures.

New York city is one of these points. Republican states, including some right here in New England, are being treated well, and in Massachusetts, Republican communities are favored.

But the ragged treatment being accorded Democratic states and municipalities here is already being used as ammunition by Republican orators.

From the point of view of Washington, delay may be smart, no matter how badly the needy fare, but indications in Massachusetts are that the strategy may prove a boomerang.

The bureaucrats are marking time too long, waiting for 1936.

Trapped in Elevator

Somerville Man Tells How He Came Close to Death

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Come on there, cowboy—put on your woolly pants and buckle on those spurs. We're going out into the West for today's adventure—out into the State of Montana with THOMAS H. YOULTEN of 86 FRANKLIN STREET, SOMERVILLE, to accompany him on a wild ride he took back in the year of 1913.

FLOYD GIBBONS

And I'll give you, boys and girls, three guesses as to what kind of an animal it was that Tom took that ride on.

Horse? Nope! Cow? Nope! Pink-eyed whifflebat? Nope—you're all wrong. It was an automatic elevator.

It was just a couple of days before Christmas, and Tom was a ten year-old kid, taking part in a Christmas play that was being given in the basement auditorium of a big hall on East Granite street in Butte.

The play was over, and some old bozo with long whiskers was on the stage giving a lecture on something or other that no kid could possibly be interested in, so Tommy and two other boys sneaked out and began roaming around the building.

Out in the hall they found an elevator—an automatic one, of the kind that you operate yourself by pressing buttons—and if there ever was a sweller thing for three kids to play with, Tommy had never heard of it.

They got in, pressed a button, and whoops! up they went to the top floor.

They did that until they got tired of riding, and then they invented a more dangerous game to play. That old elevator must have been the first of the automatic ones ever built.

It had no safety gate as the modern ones have, and those three kids began hanging to the landing of each floor as the car went down, leaving themselves suspended in the air a short time and then dropping back to the floor of the elevator.

Well, sir, they got away with it for three trips, hanging onto the landing at every floor. On the fourth trip, though, they didn't fare so well. At least, Tommy Youlten didn't. At the third-floor landing he hung on just a little too long. The top of the elevator came down on his little hands, catching them in a vise-like grip.

What happened immediately after that, Tommy doesn't remember very well. He doesn't know whether his hands were clamped between the elevator and the wall, or whether he was just too overcome with fright to let go.

But the next thing he knew, his head was going in between the wall and the side of the car, and he was being dragged, screaming, toward the basement.

The top of that car went over him as far as his chest, and there it held him, pressing with the brutal force of insensate steel, as it pulled him slowly along the side of the shaft. Meanwhile, inside the car, the other two kids, hysterical with fright, were trying to stop the elevator's downward progress.

They pushed the buttons again and again, but that didn't seem to do any good. The mechanism was so arranged that those buttons didn't operate while the car was in motion.

Once the car was started on its journey, its destination couldn't be changed. The only thing that would stop it was the emergency button, and that had been placed high up on the wall, far out of their reach.

And up above, his legs dangling from the top of the car, Tommy remained conscious through it all. The harsh walls brussed and lacerated his little body, and at each floor the landing would hit him a stunning blow beneath the chin.

"I don't think," he says, "that I'll ever see as many stars again as I saw in the few minutes that it took me to reach that basement. But even so, that wasn't the worst of it.

"For when I got to the street floor I ran into a heavy wire mesh that was built around the elevator at that level, so from there on down to the basement I was badly cut and scratched, and in some places the flesh was literally torn from my body."

By the time that elevator came to a stop, Tommy was about ready to die from fright and pain. He screamed three times and then—well—then everything went black.

"I guess," says Tommy, "I must have broken up the old guy's lecture, because those yells I let out could have been heard in Seattle. They told me later that it took about two hours to cut away the wire grille and get me loose, but I don't remember being taken out.

"I do remember a woman screaming and saying: 'He's still alive,' and someone else remarking that my chances were slim. I tried hard to say something then, but I couldn't.

"I woke up later in bed at home, with a doctor around who thought I was hurt internally. But the strangest part of the whole affair was that there was nothing wrong inside of me and not a single bone broken.

"On the other hand, there wasn't a spot on my body where you could put a dime that wasn't bruised or cut, and I had to have several stitches taken in my chin where the floor had clipped it as I passed.

"I got off pretty lightly, all things considered, but even so, I'm not signing myself up for wrestling matches with any more elevators."

There's a Wild West yarn that has the old cowboy and Indian thriller liked to a frazzle—and it's a yarn that might have happened in any city in these here now United States.

Come on, boys and girls—send me a yarn like Tom's. Tomorrow I'll be taking you down into Adventure's Bargain Basement for thrills from a new story, "Gangsters' Mistake."

RECORD WASTE CHARGED TO ROOSEVELT

By JOHN T. LAMBERT
Universal Service

Washington Oct. 21—In a blistering attack, the American Liberty League today charged the Roosevelt administration with unparalleled waste and extravagance and asserted it was jeopardizing Government finances in a desperate effort to deceive the American people.

In Washington the administration has set up the worst political spoils system in the history of the country the league charged.

The indictment is one of the most severe ever drawn against an administration in power.

BROKEN PLEDGES

Attacking the President's latest budget message which shows the administration would spend a total of 7000 million dollars this year that the league says forces an annual deficit of 3½ billion dollars, and that the national debt now exceeds 30,000 million dollars, the league declared:

"Waste and extravagance have characterized expenditures in the regular as well as the 'emergency' branches of the government.

"A vast network of bureaucracy has been created under executive orders without the specific legislative sanction intended under the Constitution.

"The wanton proficiency of the present administration represents a flagrant violation of campaign pledges.

RECORD OF DEFICITS

"Prompt elimination of deficits, now in their sixth year, is one of the essentials for the preservation of American institutions.

"Indefinite continuance of an unbalanced budget will lead to a breakdown of treasury credit, devastating inflation and chaos from which might come dictatorship and an end of constitutional government."

The League declared that Mr Roosevelt could balance the budget and thereby promote business recovery and re-employment of the idle workers, by putting into the government the simple economies which enable the average family to live within its income.

AUSTEN LAKE

Word of Mercy For College Gridiron Sufferers

Austen Lake

WELL, TALK ABOUT FUN! The Dartmouth boys kept foaming through and burying their helmets up to the chin-straps in the Brown boys' heaving middles, till the lads' heads almost came unscrewed and they were in danger of losing their sawdust filling through leaks in their skins.

There are no knockout decisions in college football and no mercy yells from ringside patrons to save a punch-drunk athlete from being operated on to the very death.

So the Brown boys just snuffled up their nose-bleeds, had their wounds patched with fiddle-gut and colodion cocoons, and stayed on grinning tight, mirthless grins, like patients in a dentist's chair when the little tooth drill begins to buzz about the nerve centers.

The contest went on until the late evening shadows slanted over Aldrich Field while the crowd sat with the morbid interest of a coronor's jury hearing the lady defendant say how a shot rang out and all went blank.

* * *

Consideration for the Amateurs

THE RISK OF FRACTURES, sprains and permanent injury is never so great on the football field as when an athlete has soaked up his capacity for punishment and shows the first signs of galloping disintegration. And though there are doctors on the sidelines they are not there so much to practice preventative medicine as to cure the victim of what ails him after the accident.

The professional athlete owes obedience to the rather heroic rule that the "play must go on." But since college players come under the head of amateurs who are supposed to be toiling for the pure delights of the contests, the sticking should be halted when fun ceases and the athletes of the second part are being battered to the verge of ruin.

I would suggest that when one football team, being blessed with what it takes, rolls up a 30-point margin over a rival, less endowed, the game be stopped as a hazard to the sufferers and a bore to the customers. Whatever the rival gangs have set out to prove, has been proved to the satisfaction of both sides.

The college kids deserve at least that gentle and generous consideration which is extended to the pro glove fighters.

Being in the business of selling commercial entertainment, the colleges should decide whether they owe greater loyalty to the customers who pay $1.10 to $3.30 for seats in their drafty plants, or to the kids, who are fired to the heights of instructional loyalty and risk creaky knee caps, wry necks and spine disorders to keep the A. A. solvent.

Suffolk Malefactor

JUST BEFORE SUFFOLK DOWNS put out the cat, left a note for the milkman, and latched its gates for the year, the horse Pinkertons collared a weasel-faced gent who was trying to cash a day-old race stub.

For several months Suffolk and Wonderland have been plagued by a slippery counterfeiter, who makes such cunning forgeries that only the most experienced eye can detect them.

The eye in this case was that of Frank Boyle, Suffolk pay-off boss. That and the fact that the forger asked payment for a Friday ticket, on which there was no left-over cash. So Boyle flashed a little rose colored bulb over the cashier's grill and up galloped a house dick to snatch the man by the slack of his neck and drag him to the track bastille, which is a cell used mostly by drunks and touts in the administration building.

The counterfeiter specialized in No. 3 race stubs, always faking $2 tickets and always presenting them for payment during the crowded hours next day. Being wise in pari-mutuel methods, he knew there were usually a few unpaid claims, or "Outs" as the track cashiers call them.

Pitts Cashes In

FOR A RECENT GRADUATE of the Big Granite college with the iron grating at Ossining, N. Y., Alabama Pitts has spent a sweetly profitable summer. The youth, who passed five years for stealing a $5 bill, seems to have an affinity for the No. 5.

He has received $5500 for playing out the baseball season with Albany and another $1500 for seven football games with the Philadelphia Eagles—or $5000 in all.

Now he is turning up his nose at the Eagles' offer of $50 a game for the rest of the season and plans to organize a barn-storming basketball team to tour the land and harvest his newspaper reputation.

* * *

What Every Coach Learns

EVERY YOUNG COLLEGE COACH has to learn by sad experience that he is neither so young nor so husky as he was in his varsity day. Latest is the Reverend Vernon Burkhart, school coach at Youngstown, O., who used to be a line-blaster in his day at Transylvania.

As a twice all-Kentucky back and volunteer coach he stepped into the lineup against his kids and today is minus seven of his teeth, resulting from a flying tackle.

Tad Jones in his first term at Exeter Academy made this mistake, receiving a set of broken ribs. Lou Little at Columbia drew a broken neck and spent a year in a steel harness. Harvey Harman of Penn received a Potts-fracture, and Benny Friedman of C. C. N. Y. split his jaw.

The list of such casualties, if I could compile one, would be endless. The moral to young coaches is grow old gracefully and concede the frosts of gathering age before you feel them.

Prize Football Fluke

FOR WEEK-END FOOTBALL oddities the mishap which settled the California-Santa Clara game wins the mustache cup. Joe Kelley, Santa Clara punter, stood back to kick out of danger, and punted the ball backward over his own head. The break led to California's only touchdown . . .

Denied by Washington the right to use live decoys to lure their feathered fellows within gun shot distance, duck hunters are taking the question of "Canned Quacking" to the courts. This is a phonograph device which amplifies the marsh sounds of the fowl and attracts the flocks to their execution . . .

Following the defeat of his Redskin team by the Giants in New York, Eddie Casey was sitting with a friend in one of Manhattan's movie palaces. The picture was at its gripping climax. The hero was rearing his motor through an ambush, firing as he drove. Eddie turned to the friend and in a hollow, pained tone, enquired, "Why do you suppose Bestor failed to block that tackle in the first quarter?"

Miller Made 10-8 Favorite

KING FREDDY TAKES BOW BEFORE GO IN GARDEN

CORMIER

FACES FEATHER CHAMP HERE TOMORROW

By Jack Conway

Freddy Miller is a 10 to 8 favorite to retain his title as world feather-weight champion against Vernon Cormier of Worcester in a 15-round bout at the Garden tomorrow night.

Miller recently made a triumphant ring tour of Europe, scoring 32 consecutive victories.

Cormier is also a globe trotter. He won the featherweight and lightweight championships of Australia. While in the Antipodes he scored 16 victories. He then journeyed to England where he emulated Miller's victory habits.

It will be the first time since the palmy days of the crafty George Dixon that a featherweight champion has defended his precious title in a Boston ring.

The fact Miller was able to win 32 bouts in one year is the greatest possible tribute to his ability. In many bouts he was opposed by weak opposition, but in others he clashed with the leading boxers in Europe.

It required real boxing class to complete such a long program without suffering a defeat or a serious injury.

BASKET FUND

Miller is only 24 years of age, and so has years of ring usefulness ahead of him. He says he will keep fighting until he is defeated. He has no idea of retiring while champion.

Miller has never seen Cormier. Pete Reilly and Tony Palazola have advised him as to Cormier's ring style. They have told him that the Worcester hatter is aggressive and a two handed socker.

Miller has been instructed to keep moving at a rapid clip every second he is in the ring so as to keep out of the way of Cormier's blows.

Cormier will come to Boston tonight in the company of Al Lippe, his manager. He will make his headquarters at a Back Bay hotel.

There was a report today that Miller is having trouble making the weight of 126 pounds.

The Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser will receive 15% per cent of the receipts of the championship bout.

With Miller's title at stake, the fans have been displaying intense interest in the bout.

$240,000 UP FOR 24-DAY MEETING

By Jack Conway

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Oct. 21—Walter O'Hara's Pot of Gold was to open for its fall race meeting of 24 days this afternoon.

With $240,000 in purses offered, some of the greatest thoroughbreds in the East were here for the first day of racing. There will be $41,000 offered in ten stake races.

O'Hara is also ready to hang up a purse of $25,000 if he can get Top Row, Discovery, Whopper, Time Supply and some of the other losers which competed in the Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs last week to meet again.

The $2500 Woonsocket Claiming Stakes, a six-furlong event for two-year-olds of the $1000 and upward class, was to top today's card of eight races. This stake event is the fifth race on the program.

There were to be many notables at today's opening, with Walter O'Hara and Mrs. O'Hara entertaining their guests at their swanky [illegible] on the clubhouse roof.

1000 HORSES

There will be many notables at today's opening. Walter O'Hara and Mrs. O'Hara will entertain their guests at their swanky penthouse on the roof of the clubhouse here.

Despite the opposition from Agawam and Empire City, there are [illegible] 1000 horses on the grounds, according to Racing Secretary Pat Horgan. Many horses arrived here over the week-end from Suffolk Downs, New York and the West.

The first race was at 2:15 p. m. It was necessary because of the eight race program. Darkness sets in at 6 p. m. and it is impossible to get a clear view of a race run off after that hour.

The trees along the backstretch of the [illegible] are clothed in all of their fall splendor. This adds to the beauty of the track.

The stands have been closed in with glass on three sides. They have been left open toward the south.

The daily double will continue to be a feature here, it will be decided on the results of the first and third races as in the past.

In order to enable Boston fans to get here in time to play the daily double, special trains will leave the South Station at 11:50 a. m. and the Back Bay station at 11:55 a. m. each day.

Samuel C. Nickols will again act as presiding steward. The other [illegible] will be Howard Reynolds, [illegible] Ladd Cook and C. B. Stickney. Abel Tilton will be the steward representing the Rhode Island Racing Commission.

Hey, boy! Rush this copy to the Western Union operator.

They're off at Narragansett!

B. C. COACHING STRATEGY GREAT

BRINGS WIN OVER SPARTANS

By Bill Grimes

After seeing Michigan State trounce Kansas, Head Coach John R. "Dinny" McNamara went into conference with Harry Downes, his line coach, who scouted the Spartans against Michigan, and End Coach Bill Ormsby.

Few realize the hours that the Boston College coaching staff devoted then to planning a defense to stop Charlie Backman's charges, who had romped through Kansas and Michigan.

After many pro and con arguments, the B. C. staff decided that Michigan State could be beaten by a light line and a three-two defense, with the ends crashing in on every pass.

McNamara and his aides gambled that their secondary would be able to come up fast enough to keep the Spartans from sweeping their ends.

B. C. Pair Great

Although every Eagle who participated in the Michigan State game played important roles in the 16-6 victory the lion's share of the credit belong to Eddie Forbush and Jim Cahill.

There's no tougher assignment for ends than to be ordered to play a crashing game. Some of the game's greatest flankmen have flunked on this assignment. Not Forbush and Cahill.

They were played close into the tackles, with orders to crash into that Michigan backfield on every play. When the Spartans shifted to their right position, Forbush was opposite the No. 2 back and Cahill occupied a similar position when Michigan hopped to the left.

Forbush and Cahill were literally in the hair of the Spartan backs all afternoon. And, they took a terrific pummelling while carrying out their assignments.

The Spartans' running pass was dangerous until Pat Avery was instructed to disregard the outside man and get the ball carrier, after Forbush had broken up the interference.

The tight Eagle line had a low savage charge which carried opponents with it, and the second line defense was alert and played heads-up football at all times.

Bruins, Cubs to Open Training

By Associated Press

Saint John, N. B., Oct. 21—With 26 players due here tomorrow morning, Boston Bruins and Cubs will begin nine days of pre-seasonal training.

Manager Art Ross and Coach Frank Patrick decided to keep the practice sessions private in belief this policy would assist the training and eliminate any nervousness that the presence of critical fans might cause among prospects trying out for places with the teams.

The annual pre-season game between Bruins and Cubs will be played Saturday night. The Bruins and Montreal Canadiens will open a Maritime tour here the following Monday, playing at Moncton Wednesday, at Halifax November 1 and November 4 and concluding their Maritime workouts at Charlottetown November 6.

Observers Click

One of the main reasons for Boston College furnishing the greatest upset of the season was that Head Coach McNamara decided weeks ago that he'd have his entire coaching staff available for Michigan State. He had Ormsby on the bench and on the top of the press stand were Downes, Frank Maloney, Tim Cahill, Bill Smith, and Jim McKenney. McNamara's observers clicked beautifully.

McKenney, Downes and Maloney noticed that the Spartans left end was fading. There was one exception. Then it was noted that when Boston College shifted right, Wagner, the Michigan State right guard, slid across to protect the strong side. There was a perfect setup for plays to the short side.

On the B. C. squad is one of the best inside tackle runners in three parts, Eddie Driscoll who had been on the side lines all season. Just as soon as McNamara saw informed that Wagner was overshifting, he sent Driscoll into the game. The ball was given to Michaels on victory, with the door ajar for the Eagles to tie up the ball game.

Wagner Fooled

The Eagles shifted right. Wagner hopped to his left to protect the strong side. Driscoll was in the deep position. He received the ball, took one short step to his right, faigning a throw to that side and then shot directly at the center of the line. Just before he reached the line, he veered sharply to the left, shot through the hole left by Wagner and scored standing up.

Instead of trying to sweep the Spartan ends, the Eagle backs were instructed to stay wide and then cut outside tackle and use a reguli Boston College picked up many yards. From the tip Coach McNamara received from his spotter.

The top of the press stand gets really worse looking for a wide-open forward pass defense and finally discovered one. The Spartans played a 2-2-1 defense, with Wagner, the guard, assigned to pass test the end. Jesse Wagner's great guard but as a guard is not quite a play developer and they drop out of the line before he gets over the center pass.

Strategy and many more hours of planning on the part of the coaches are the fact that the players carried out their instructions to the nth degree brought Boston College through in a way deserved victory over a team which is admittedly one of the best in the country.

Malden Up Against It Saturday

By Will Connell

A thinning line of unbeaten and untied squads faces wintry blasts this week as the schoolboys prepare for the mid-season tests.

Malden, Fitchburg and Gardner, among the few leading teams left with perfect records, tiptoe hopefully into battle but won't be amazed at disaster.

Malden travels to Manchester Central where Hubie McDonough has another of his strong teams ready to make up for the loss to Malden last fall.

Fitchburg and Gardner, up-state enemies, get together at Gardner. A tie or scoreless game appears unlikely here for each has an effective attack. And before the mainspring of the timekeeper's watch snaps the affair into the dusk of grid history—

(Ed. Note — Here, here, Will Save the poetry for national holidays.)

An up-state title contender may stand all alone when the returns are in on the Gardner merry-go-round. If you can, see this game. It should be worth the trip.

If you'd rather go to Manchester, follow Malden. It has been good enough to win each game, even though by narrow scores, as in the 7 to 6 conquest of Arlington, Saturday last. Central always is one of the strongest Malden foes and may be able to grab this engagement. Though odds indicate otherwise.

MALDEN THERE

Medford, a fighting team that has developed with every start, came through under fire at Everett with a 2-0 decision, thus knocking Everett out of the crown race for the time being.

Because before the season is over percentages state that no major school will be unbeaten and untied. In this case the title will be a matter for winter-long, if fruitless, debate.

Medford gets a rest this week entertaining Watertown which has not shown anything to worry the home team.

Other good games of Saturday include Revere at Everett (no setup for the home team), Salem at Bangor, Maine, Lynn English at Waltham, and unbeaten and untied Malden Catholic playing Cathedral at Medford.

Salem will be confident indeed when it takes the week-end trip, as a result of its 19 to 0 whitewash of Lawrence. The latter hasn't lost for 30 games past, so Mark Devlin can't complain.

Midweek games bring some close double headers at Fenway Park with South Boston playing Charlestown and Memorial playing Brighton on Wednesday; Mechanic Arts against Roxbury and Dorchester and Trade on Thursday; and a headliner with B. C. High meeting English and Hyde Park tackling East Boston on Friday. Latin has its annual game at St. Mark's for Saturday.

H. C. Gets JOLT

TERRIERS ARE DAZED

By Walter Kiley

Boston College and Holy Cross, noted Jesuit College rivals, figured prominently in the week-end football.

There was a big difference, however.

Whereas the Eagles turned in the biggest upset since Columbia beat Stanford in the Rose Bowl game two years ago by their totally unexpected 18-6 victory over the vaunted Michigan Staters, the Purple was surprisingly tied 13-13 by Manhattan.

Holy Cross had previously been undefeated, untied and unscored upon in four games.

It looked for an easy win over Chick Meehan's up and coming New Yorkers. Its hopes seemed justified going into the fourth period with a 13-0 lead.

Until along came Jimmy Whalan who was instrumental in punching out a first touchdown and, then raced a punt back 82 yards for the evening points.

"Flying Al" Hessberg was the big hero of the Tale 7-6 decision over Navy. His 20-yard touchdown romp counted for six large points.

Dave Morey sprung a real surprise on Boston University, Bates holding the Terriers to a 6-6 tie, which must be registered as an upset.

Poor Brown was helpless against Dartmouth. Williams handed Rowdon its first defeat since Adam Walsh took over. Harvard did well to hold Army to a 13-0 score, the Crimson's first defeat at Michie Stadium.

Notre Dame walked out of the Pittsburgh stadium with its first victory over the Panthers in four years, the score 9-6. Acting Captain Marty Peters broke up a bitterly contested ball game with a 28-yard placement goal in the final period which dissolved a tie.

Al McCoy's Northeastern Huskies kept up their undefeated record with a 33-0 defeat of Norwich. Tufts broke into the win column for the first time this season with Middlebury the victim, 20-14.

Mr. Boston Down The Sports Line

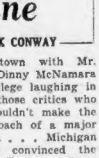
By JACK CONWAY

AROUND town with Mr. Boston . . . Dinny McNamara of Boston College laughing in the faces of those critics who insisted he couldn't make the grade as a coach of a major college eleven . . . Michigan State players convinced the nearest they will get to a Rose Bowl game is when they listen in on a radio broadcast.

Carl Pojello, the heavyweight wrestler, showing a flock of clippings from New York newspapers which bear out his claim that Ed Don George ran out of the bout with him . . . Paul Bowser admitting George avoided Pojello while champion, and adding he would like to see Carl go over big here . . . In view of fact he needs new opponents for Dan O'Mahoney.



Mr. Boston

Pete Reilly denying he is the greatest manager in the boxing game despite his success with Freddy Miller, world featherweight champion, who meets Vernon Cormier of Worcester in a title bout at the Garden tomorrow night. Jack Delaney, Max Schmeling, Andre Routis and other punch flingers . . . Reilly turned over Delaney, Routis and Schmeling to Joe Jacobs so that he could devote more time to a stable of horses . . . Reilly declaring he gets as much of a kick out of handicapping a race card as he does seconding Miller.

JACK SHARKEY

JACK SHARKEY back in town after a week in the Maine woods in the company of Tom Coolidge of Newton . . . Picking Miller to win from Cormier, but adding that the Worcester featherweight can upset the apple cart if he clicks with one of his healthy right hand punches . . . Sharkey asserting he did some road work while in Maine, and that he weighs only 204 pounds . . . Refusing to say "yes" or "no" when I declared I believed he would stage a ring come back during the coming winter . . . With a bout with Joe Louis early next summer as his fistic goal . . . Sharkey then remarking that he didn't think the "Brown Bomber" was a finished boxer and that he believed he could beat him with a left hand.

Jack McGrath wiring that 14,000 persons saw Dan O'Mahoney pin Jim Browing in their bout in the Maple Leaf Garden, Toronto . . . And adding that 400,000 customers have seen the Irishman in action since he first came to the United States 10 months ago . . . Making him a greater box office attraction than Joe Louis.

BILLY Ames asking me to check in for the opening of the fall racing season at Narragansett Park today . . . Promising me plenty of first class racing, and maybe a few winners . . . I can picture Billy telling me Guardian is ready to step on the gas.

Walter O'Hara sending his lieutenants to the various Eastern race tracks to get horses for Narragansett . . . Eager to have at least 1200 at the Pawtucket strip.

Eugene Burinett of Somerville, State Racing Steward, preparing to go to Agawan to see the thoroughbreds in action from the stewards' stand . . . And also to get his first peek at Lou Little's new track . . . Lou Smith and Jim Munroe making convincing arguments to horsemen as to why they should keep their thoroughbreds at Agawam . . . And then take them to Epsom Downs, Texas, for the Fall meeting which opens in November.

NOTRE DAME

PERSONAL opinion . . . Notre Dame's football team is the best attraction on the college gridiron . . . Crowd of 52,000 persons at South Bend, Indiana, saw Irish licked Pitt . . . Same game in either New York or Chicago would have drawn 75,000 to 100,000 . . .

Notre Dame against Harvard or Boston College in this city would furnish the tops in a football attraction.

Redskins Fe-Fi-Foed By Giants, 17 to 6

ONCE WHEN FOOTBALL FANS DID SOME TRAIN-ING

Money Berth Vanishes

NEW YORKERS RUN WILD IN 1ST STANZA

By Murray Kramer

New York, Oct. 22—If there was any doubt about the New York Giants being a great money team, it was dispelled onec and for all at the Polo Grounds as they drubbed the Boston Redskins, 17-6.

A victory for the Redskins would have given them an excellent chance to get into the playoffs and earn a $700 bonus.

Statistics show that the Redskins outrushed the Giants and that they made more first downs, but first downs aren't pointe.

The Giants were the better money team, capitalizing on opportunities. They tucked the game up before it was five minutes old and then coasted in. Curiously enough, it was Texas Teddy Wright, the hero of last week, who must go down as the "goat."

Ken Strong kicked over the goal line to open the game, and the Redskins took the ball on their twenty. Wright tried to crow up the opposition with a pass on the first play, but it was intercepted by Shaffer on the twenty. Three bucks netted seven yards, and Strong then booted a very nifty placement to settle three points on the Giants' ledger.

RENTNER STARS

Another kickoff and this time Wright tried a line buck which lost five yards. Texas Teddy then figured on fooling the Giants with a quick kick, but Mr. "Red" Badgro, all All-Pro end, saw though Wright's gamble and deflected the kick right into Corsine's arms, who romped 15 yards to score.

To insure the game Benny Newman, who returned to the fold this week, did a bit of plain and fancy passing to feature a 65-yard march for a score to wind up the first period with a 17 to 0 lead.

The last half was all Redskins —"Pug" Rentner, who, incidentily was the best running back of the day, and Cliff Battles ran wild. But one touchdown was all that could be obtained.

It was the same old trouble for the Boston outfit. Weakness on pass defense and inability to stop off tackle thrusts caused their downfall. On offense, Bill Shepherd must again take partial blame. Time after time, eligible pass receivers were out in the open, but constantly tossed the ball short of the intended man with the result that five passes were intercepted.

Despite the loss, however, it would be unfair to take any credit away from Pug Rentner, Cliff Battles, Flavio Tosi, Frank Bausch and Eddie Kahn. This quintet played great football.

Field Goals Beat Lions, 13-9

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 21 (US)—Green Bay Packers turned back the powerful Detroit Lions in a sensational national pro football league eastern duel at State Fair Park, 13 to 9, before a crowd of 10,000.

The Packers did all their scoring in the second half. Ad Schwammel blocked Frank Christensen's punt, and Don Huston picked up the ball to run 30 yards for a touchdown, which put the Packers in the lead early in the third period. Ernie Smith kicked goal.

Schwammel place-kicked 25 yards to boost the lead to 10 to 3 later in the period.

Schwammel completed the scoring for the Bays in the final heat, when he drilled one between the uprights from the 41 yard line.

Detraining at the Harlem river station in New York, the 160 members of the football excursion quit the "Comet" for buses to take them to the Polo Grounds. Some 3160 wanted to make the trip

Crashing through two of his own players, Pug Rentner of the Redskins picks up four yards and a first down in second period of Giants-Redskins game. Johnny Del Isola, former Everett and Fordham star, now pivoting for the Giants, brought Rentner down. The Giants won, 17-6.

Harvard Better, Hardwick Notes

Will Be Hard to Beat In Few More Weeks

Shuler's End Play Extolled

By H. R. Hardwick
All-Time, All-America End at Harvard

The strongest impression I retain of Saturday's game between Harvard and Army at West Point, is that of a heated scrimmage between a first and second team of the same institution.

Both Harvard and the Army have much the same offense; Army, however, being from three to four weeks farther advanced in the execution of the plays, and neither Harvard nor Army even approximating the final possibilities of that system.

Harvard on offense was particularly uncertain. An insufficiency of support in the line again and again resulted in plays, in which any delay was required, being literally smothered before they got underway.

Two factors caused this—both of about equal influence: 1, Harvard's uncertain blocking in the forward line, and, 2, the desperate, decisive charge of the Army forwards.

Shuler and Smith spent most of their defensive moments in the very center of Harvard's delayed pass plays, and Clifford, backing up the right side of the Army line, was frequently making tackles three and four yards in Crimson territory.

INTERFERENCE

On sweeps in which the Harvard back really got started with a cluster of interferers in advance, those interferers lacked the power and the weight to wipe out the incharging ends and secondaries.

Then again, on frequent occasions, these interferers, apparently intent on some specifically designated defenseman, ran right past fast charging Cadets who consistently made the tackle just behind the wall of interferers.

To be sure, lack of lateral support in the line was permitting these men to break into the heart of the play, and they were not the players against whom, under proper conditions, the interferers would be assigned.

But there they were, and had the interferers adjusted themselves to the situation and smashed into the first dangerous tackler, many of Adigian's and Moseley's sweeps would have resulted in more than "brilliant lateral runs."

It's the distance gained and not the distance run that makes a successful play.

Likewise the Army, by having its secondary defense move up at such speed, left itself vulnerable to passes.

An experienced, instinctively smart quarterback—a Rex Kidd for example—would have slowed down those secondaries or else would have consistently completed passes in the spots they so openly left uncovered in their eagerness to come in fast.

HEDBLOM

Hedblom may with further experience and teaching develop shrewdness in employing his offensive weapons to their best advantage—a factor which now is notably lacking.

He is a fine little rooster if ever there was one, and what a rugged afternoon he put in backing up the line!

A very encouraging Harvard feature was the work of Capt. Kelly and Dubiel in covering punts.

On kick after kick they threw off the blocking backs and arrived practically with the ball.

I don't believe Harvard's punts were run back a total of 10 yards all afternoon. Close covering of a punt gave the Crimson its sole scoring threat when Kelly recovered a fumbled fair catch on the Army 38-yard line.

The following few plays represented the only time Harvard held the ball in Army territory.

A substantial portion of that credit rests on George Ford's shoulders. It was his excellent punting that permitted such close covering. His kicks were high, of good length and well placed.

The Army punting on the other hand was spotty, and the ends were frequently outkicked. In fact aHrvard's greatest ground gaining runs were run backs of punts by Adzirian and Moseley.

MOSELEY

Speaking of Moseley, what has happened to his game?

As a schoolboy and in other years at college he was a brilliant runner.

Quick starting, fast of foot, with an elusive style, he was a real threat. He ran with an arrogant and audacious disregard of results and hit like a bullet.

This year his running is apathetic and diffident. No-one who has watched hi neither at football or at hockey could or does question his courage—far from it!

Sometimes, after an injury, a player, entirely unrealized by himself, will develop an aprehensiveness which distinctly lowers the calibre of his play.

I surmise that's the case with Moseley, that it will rapidly wear off and that he will again delight with his dashing abandon.

For the Army, Shuler's end play was a treat to watch, whether crashing down a prospective tackler or smearing a runner in his tracks.

He is the best end I have seen this season.

The entire Army line was hard charging and aggressive with Smith and Clifford noticeably efficient.

In the backfield much should be heard later of Charles R. Meyer, whose running and passing Saturday gave great promise.

ADLIS GREAT

For Harvard, Adlis was a tower of strength in the line—no, tower is not the word, as a tower is slightly immovable, whereas Adlis was defensively here, there and everywhere.

Up on the varsity squad less than a week, his offensive play needed polish in assignment. That is bound to come.

Kessler continued his high standard of play, and Knapp in his brief appearance showed up well.

Adzigian is admittedly a dangerous runner but he must have better protection in order to get started and to get loose in the open.

Saturday the interference was not effective. The interfering backs were frequently in the right spot and hit their man, but they seemed to lack weight or force. They would bounce off the tackler, leaving him still standing and dangerous.

WILL IMPROVE

Harvard suffered its second successive defeat but even so showed marks of progress. "Rome was not built in a day," and before this season closes Harvard will get into a winning stride and cause plenty of trouble for later game opponents.

Surely neither Coach Harlow, his staff, the players themselves nor those who follow football closely are discouraged.

Wilson, Abu!

Averaging better than two winners a day, Dave Wilson, the Boston Evening American's turf expert, led the handicappers at the short meeting which closed at Suffolk Downs last Saturday.

Dave had 37 winners and 215 selections in the money. He has yet to trail in the field of handicapping during any local race meeting.

For consistency and ability in handicapping, Dave is always found at the top. He is now stationed at Narragansett. His graded selections will appear every day as usual. He is also making graded handicaps for the Agawam track.

ROCKNE 'SPINNER' DECEPTIVE

Wound Up in End Around, Lateral And Usually a Touchdown

Rockne Plays
Still Promote Thrills Along Hanley Spine

Pat Hanley Recalls It

By L. B. "Pat" Hanley
Head Coach at Boston University
(Copyright, by Boston Evening American)

Everytime I hear "end around," the memory of Knute Rockne comes flashing back.

There is one day in particular I shall never forget. It was back in 1931 when I was at Northwestern with my brother Dick, and we clashed with Notre Dame.

Things were rolling along smoothly when suddenly the Irish came up with a double spinner which wound up in an end around and a touchdown.

We braced ourselves for a repeat on this play but when it was again run the South Bend masters hung a lateral on the end of it to make matters more confusing.

It unsettled our gang just long enough to allow Notre Dame to get out front. And once the Irish have a couple of touchdowns you can generally count that particular game in the South Bend trophy room.

It is this play that I am presenting to the readers of the Boston Evening American today.

THESPIANS

The right halfback must be a master at deception and make the play go. He first fakes to the fullback, then gives it to the end and continues on to crash through tackle.

The fullback, after making a proper fake, gives the impression of just being a decoy in order to detract and get out in a position to take a lateral if the occasion presents itself.

In today's photographs, each player is plainly marked so that you can easily follow the various assignments.

It is a great play, but much time must be taken in practice to get the timing and ball handling down perfectly before attempting execution in a game.

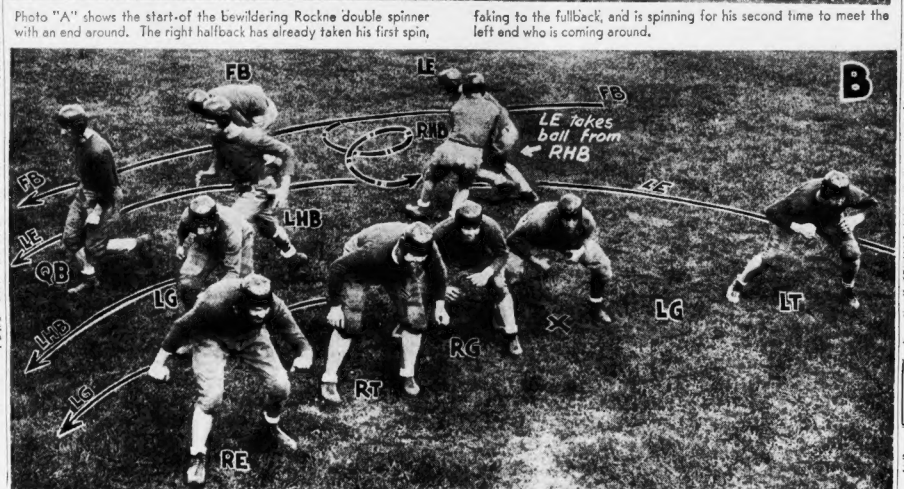
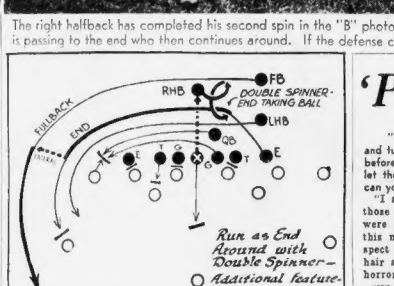
Photo "A" shows the start of the bewildering Rockne double spinner with an end around. The right halfback has already taken his first spin, faking to the fullback, and is spinning for his second time to meet the left end who is coming around.



The right halfback has completed his second spin in the "B" photo and is passing to the end who then continues around. If the defense closes in, he laterals to the fullback who is running wide, otherwise, he carries himself.



This is technically known as an end around play with a double spinner and an optional lateral. It has plenty of deception and should be a great ground gainer. The above diagram shows the complete play and the correct lineup before the ball is snapped.

MAHONEY Challenges Nazi SPORTS HEAD

New York, Oct. 21 (US)—In an attack on Germany's Olympic policy, Judge Jeremiah T. Mahoney, president of the Amateur Athletic Union, challenged the authority of Dr. Theodore Lewald, president of the German Olympic committee, to make any promises with regard to the 1936 Olympic games at Berlin.

In a letter to Dr. Lewald, Judge Mahoney charged all promises that the Olympic code would be upheld, offered by the German government, have been violated.

He expressed the conviction that the Olympic code cannot be upheld by Germany as long as the Nazi regime remains in power.

Judge Mahoney advised Dr. Lewald to resign his office instead of "being used as a screen to conceal his government's most flagrant violations of the Olympic ideal of fair play for all."

This was the first direct communication from Judge Mahoney with the German Olympic committee on the subject of American participation in the Olympics.

'Prisoner of the OGPU' By GEORGE KITCHIN

CHAPTER 29

"Yes, indeed, there is something to report all right," he said, and turning to the bookkeeper, added: "You will all die out here before spring; you have a typhus epidemic in full swing, and you let the healthy, the sick and the dying all sleep together. How can you do that?

"I am not even mentioning those sick with the flu; they were all driven out to work this morning and Ishall inspect them tonight. But my hair stands on end from the horrors I've seen so far.

"Where is Aaronovich? He should order the sick transferred to another building at once."

The commander acceded to the doctor's demands and decided to clear one of the warehouses and to have the sick taken there. All the prisoners left at the base were mobilized for this work.

Towards evening squads of prisoners began arriving at the base from their work in the forest. Their miserable appearance defied description.

They had not eaten all day and were hungry as wolves. The familiar washbasins filled with thin fish soup and porridge were brought into the barracks. One washbasin had to do for ten prisoners.

My work at the base was finished. I had made my "investigations" and had nothing more to do. Therefore I decided to inspect the barracks.

But the doctor, whom I met in the yard, stopped me and advised against it.

"Why take an unnecessary risk?" he said. "The lice in the barracks will immediately creep upon you, one bite and you are done for, and typhus is no joke. "I simply cannot understand how it is that all of them are not sick yet. Most of the prisoners are barely keeping body and soul together. They sleep beside the sick without undressing, don't wash at all, are underfed and overworked, and still they do not catch it.

"It is an astounding example of vitality. But I'll guarantee that when spring comes the epidemic will spare no one."

Another squad entered the gate and came toward us. The doctor's white smock attracted attention and we were immediately surrounded. Three young men with pale, haggard faces begged the doctor to do something to help their sick friends in the barracks.

They were young Ukrainians, students of Kiev University, who were accused of being politically unsafe and socially dangerous and had been sentenced to the penal camps. Seven of them had come to the Pitsky base.

Two had died, two were sick with typhus and the remaining three were sent out to the forest every day.

The doctor went into the barracks. Just at this time a sleigh drove up to the gates and several half-frozen prisoners literally fell out of it.

They were dressed in rags, quite inadequate for work in the bitter cold. Shivering and half congealed, they made their way towards the barracks with difficulty. Especially pathetic was the last prisoner, a little Turcoman with a black beard. He crawled on all fours, yelping like a pup.

I tried to lift him but he could not stand and continued on his way, weeping and emitting some piteous, unintelligible guttural sounds. The watchman looked at him indifferently and continued to smoke.

I went into the office and, spreading my sheepskin coat on the floor, lay down. The doctor had not come back. About an hour earlier the commander of the base had taken Zakhariants to his house for dinner. Our meal was brought to us at the office.

"It will end up in a general drinking bout," said the bookkeeper. "They will all get tight, make friends and everything will be settled. Don't forget that Aaronovich, Sergeyev and your Zakhariants are all chekists, birds of a feather.

"They will have a little chat and a good drink, your commission will go back to Kotlas and we shall all remain here exactly as before.

"Men will get half rations, will continue chopping off their fingers, will die, will be beaten and thrown into the dungeon, and finally Aaronovich will receive official thanks for his efficiency and for completing his share of the plan."

The cook came in and whispered something to him.

"There, you see, it is just as I predicted! They are calling for Lizzie. They say the cook does not know how to serve at table."

We waited till the doctor came and then started to eat the fried salt fish and the millet gruel. We heard singing coming from the yard.

"As I told you," said the bookkeeper. "They are already singing. Remember this morning's loud threats of arrest?"

Indian Asks Title Go

Chief War Eagle, rugged Redskin, will demand a title bout with the winner of the Winn Robbins-Mephisto light heavyweight championship bout if he disposes of Sam Gardner, former Villanova fullback, in Mechanics Building tomorrow night.

War Eagle is facing a stiff assignment in meeting the former grid hero, who has embarked on a wrestling career and is well coached in the art of the mat game.

CHELSEA Sends Sitkowski AGAINST COUNT

Stan Sitkowski, giant from Chelsea, will be Count Casimir Polowski's opponent in the semifinal bout of the wrestling show Wednesday night at the Arena it was announced by Alex MacLean today.

The Polish peer, as yet unbeaten, is taking them tougher with each bout and, while Sitkowski is considered a "new discovery," he may upset the nobleman in their 30-minute match.

In the main bout Count George Zarynoff collides with Charlie Strack, a two out of three falls fray with Zarynoff picked to whip the Oklahoma bad man.

The acrobatic Zarynoff has hopes of getting back into the big wrestling money again, and believes a victory over Strack will pave his way.

Zarynoff and Polowski, victims of European overthrows of nobility, are two of the most colorful madmen in the business, and MacLean expects a near capacity crowd at the Arena Wednesday night.

Foreign Loans a Bar

They Check Progress

IF THE American people remain firm in their present determination to avoid a repetition of the follies of financing foreign wars, the conservation of resources will enable us to go far in improving domestic living standards.

In the private financing of allen wasters during the gay 1920's the wool was pulled over the eyes of American investors by our international bankers.

The very financiers who opposed all suggestions for bettering conditions of American life as visionary, nevertheless floated loans to finance Socialistic schemes in Germany and elsewhere to build swimming pools, gymnasia and public parks.

THE Peek studies recently disclosed that, apart from war loans, we lent foreigners a total of thirteen thousand million dollars since 1915. In addition, ten thousand million dollars are tied up in defaulted war loans.

In human terms, these mistaken operations mean that we deprived ourselves of potential further advances in living standards in order to subsidize foreign nations to carry on their quarrels and their foibles.

It would have been vastly better to have said "No" to their appeals for financial succor.

If the funds thus frozen had been invested in productive enterprise at home it would have permitted the complete retooling of American industry, eliminating the obsolete and replacing it with the up to date.

Moreover, such an outlay would have financed a program of ideal housing for the American people.

UNQUESTIONABLY, we are weakened by our past mistakes.

On top of scandalously unwise foreign financial adventures, we have embarked on the current extravagant period of Federal spending for raking leaves and boondoggling.

The present crisis calls for non-participation in foreign lending and for a rapid tapering off of wasteful Federal spending.

In such circumstances, an expanding business will gradually absorb the unemployed, and obviate the need of extraordinary relief expenditures.

To the extent that public spending is still necessary to provide synthetic jobs, it should be concentrated on useful, self-liquidating projects, such as low-cost housing.

In the future, instead of subsidizing social projects in Europe and South America, we should formulate a program which will make Americans beneficiaries of the fruits of surplus national wealth.

Economy Needed

One Misleading Slogan

Carl P. Dennett of Boston, chairman of the National Economy League, asked at Hartford last week how much longer people will allow themselves to be fooled by the slogan "A Greater Abundance of Living."

Reginald W. Bird, president of the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers' Associations, must have had the same thought in mind when he spoke in Boston a couple of days later.

"Every dollar that we carelessly waste," declared Mr. Bird, "means that the life of the men and women who are the toilers of this country will be so much the more meager."

Mr. Bird brought out the fact that the American people are now spending for taxes annually about one and one-fifth as much as for food.

Politics is defined by the dictionaries as "the science of government."

It is time for racketeering and incompetency to be eliminated from politics.

Business Pointers

Found Favorable

It is always easy to distinguish between the prosperity seen by false prophets and that really marking a turn for the better.

Simply check up on the manner in which people use their credit and pay their bills.

Thus the statements that were made by L. S. Crowder before the Boston Retail Credit Men's Association are extremely important.

He finds retail store collections some 10 per cent. BETTER than a year ago at a time when people are expanding purchases on credit.

We are convinced this indicates not only the will to buy but security in the knowledge it can be afforded.

Blocking the Roads

"Left-Hand" Drivers

The Massachusetts automobile registry department will have the warm approval of most car drivers in its campaign against those who persistently hog the middle of the road.

These offenders are called "left-hand" drivers because they fail to obey signs telling them to keep to the right except when passing.

Study of statistics reveals they are the cause of numerous accidents.

Any highway safety campaign would be incomplete if it failed to punish drivers habitually ignoring road regulations.

The Newspaper

A Modern Help

President George W. Rightmire of Ohio State University, welcoming a record-sized freshman class last week, told them:

"On information and ideas coming to us through the daily press we plan our daily life. We little realize how newspapers dominate us."

Dr. Rightmire also believes "no one can succeed without the news."

If you agree with all—or even part—of this, you will also be able to see the desirability of concentrating, perhaps more than ever before, on what the daily newspaper has to give you.

Plenty of Life in It Yet

To meddle with a hornet
Is not a pleasant thing,
For even though you scorn it
It has been a wicked sting.
It does not like to be annoyed
By simple folk whose skulls are void.

To prod the Constitution,
As crackpots often try,
Brings sudden retribution
And stingers on the fly.
It is a quaint and childish quest
Like meddling with a hornet's nest.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Oct. 21—In the manner of Arnold a Bennett's journal: I was wondering this morning if any man can sit crosslegged in his dressing gown listening to his wife and not dangle a slipper from his toes. Chic Sale's Abe Lincoln movie short is a gem. I'm up with my work schedule the first time this year.

O. O. McIntyre

They were gabbing in the other room about new styles. I was tempted to horn in and exclaim: "Ladies, when you see a gown now beautiful, now ugly, then beautiful again, you have a truly Parisian creation. Buy it!" We saw Ethel Roche off for Palm Beach today. Brave lady.

A bewildered hotspur from Cat Corner, N. C., telegraphs from Grand Central: "Who invented this horrible gobobrification of taxis, fins, flukes and lamplidarious gefoo-jits." Sounds like Eva Tanguay and Fifi D'Orsay in a shimmy contest. I was in a blaze again at breakfast about the radio.

Why do radio bleaters all croon just alike? To turn the dial through the sighing of squawkers, squeakers, croomers, drawlers, whiners, moaners, droolers, mewers and such. Oh, well. And why the insincerity and falsified rising of inflections in even the sketches? Why not come out and say it with conviction?

The saddest time of year is when a man has to listen to style's fee-faw-fum and give up his lively sartorials, the white flannels and blazers, for sombre winter regalia.

We love to be gaudy and the only vanity of winter is a furcollared coat. And the man doesn't live who, in a fur-collared coat, doesn't look like a ham actor or corn doctor. That goes for ever, Justice Hughes.

An A. P. man in Kansas City sends an euphonic honey. A radio lady Wawhilna—pronounced Waw-hill-uh—Lahay. I hear the Arkansas Senator Robinson's spats may defeat him for re-election. Tsk, tsk!

I called on the haberdashing brothers, McCrory, who make Roy Howard's giddy shirts, for samples today. I saw a fellow from London at Major Bowes's with shirting of alternate pencil stripes, dove gray and cream, touched off with a four-in-hand of solid black. Startling effect.

But my efforts to be satirically imitative suggest a Dakota modiste copying a Parisian style. Charles Correll, Andy of the radio blackamoors, is leaving to fly his own plane. Daily he flies over Oscar Shaw's Long Island estate and waves.

My pipe smoking friend of Hampton magazine days, T. Everett Harre, turns in a rousing pasteboffelia with "The Heavenly Sinner," a biography of the magnificent courtesan, Lola Montez, done with all the seriousness of an animal mother licking its young.

M. came in white faced awhile ago to inquire if there could possibly be anything so frightening as the sudden running amok of a wild window shade, jumping with a swish to the ceiling? I thought of a dandier fright.

In a dinky tavern outside Reno one sun-up a cow stuck its head in my window and mooed. I did a sitting jump over the footboard. Why is everything in New York priced 69 cents? Or why do lone gray-haired women begin a restaurant dinner with a cigarette?

Someone told me Ray Noble, the left-handed orchestra leader, carries a cameo ring around his necktie. An old-fashioned revival. Lord Ribbesdale started it in Britain in the Edwardian era. The only exponents I ever saw were Ralph Barton, Lew Cody and William Gillette.

I like to round that southwest swing of Central Park at sundown with out-of-town visitors and call attention, quite casually, to the skyline. It never fails to excite oo's. What a painting for Maxfield Parrish. Or an etching by Fred Detweiller.

A Montreal lady writes about a name for a newborn son. Jay strikes me as bang-up for a boy. Virile, back-country, substantial. Five fine-characterred fellows with that name come to me—Jay E. House, Jay N. Darling, Jay Price, Jay E. Kaufman and Jay Jerome Williams.

I beheld The Most Heartless Man in the World today. He passed a window of pathetic, friendless but friendly pumpkin faces hopping on paper scraps in a dog shop without stopping. Gave only a glance.

Amos and Andy are telling about lunching with Will Rogers in the Senate restaurant. Garner and Allen Longworth there. Talk turned to bleakness of investments.

Two per cent interest. Inquired Mrs. Longworth: "Will, what are you going to do with your savings?" He squirmed, cuffed his cowlick and drawled: "I guess I'm goin' to be puttin' mine into taxes!" Aren't we all?

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

They've Never Lost Their Baby Teeth

You've wondered about them—haven't you?—those puzzling, exasperating people who look like grown-ups and talk like grown-ups, but somehow never quite fit into the grown-up world.

Elsie Robinson

The man who should be hanging up records in business and professional life but are, instead, loafing around, footloose, at odds with everyone.

They never can hold a job more than a few weeks and, to hear them tell it, it's never THEIR fault. Someone's always picking on them—making them the goat.

Then there are the Master Minds who can't bother to perform the commonplace chores because they're always expecting Something To Turn Up. The fellows with the Great Invention that will revolutionize the world—if someone will only capitalize it. Or the epoch-making scheme for government.

HAUNTING NIGHTMARE

Plenty of women like that, too. Restless, unhappy women with hungry eyes. Strange they can't be contented! They've comfortable homes, good husbands, nice children. But—it isn't enough.

They want Something Else. So on and on they go—joining new Movements—taking up new Cults—experimenting with new Fads. Or, perhaps, having Affaire.

Or there's that tiresome tribe—the Collegiate Kids of 35 and 40, who are never happy unless they're Cutting Up—organizing Parties—mapping Wisecracks. Serious talk bores these mellow babies to tears. One nightmare haunts them all—the thought of growing old.

What ails them—these queer people who can't click with a grown-up world? They don't know, themselves; would refuse to admit that anyone does. But any mind doctor knows their secret.

It started long ago, when they were broody youngsters looking enviously at their elders, thinking how wonderful life would be when they were grown up, too, and COULD DO JUST WHAT THEY PLEASED.

DO YOU REMEMBER?

Remember that time in your own life—your timid, sensitive, self-conscious 'teens—and the dizzy dreams you had of the days when you'd be entirely free and independent; glorious days when life would hold no more puzzling problems or hateful obligations? Duties—how you loathed them! But SOME day!

But the years passed, and bit by bit you discovered that grown-up life wasn't like your dreams at all. To the contrary, it was drearier, far, than youth—far more filled with restrictions and responsibilities.

And at first you were bitter and frightened and filled with self-pity at this discovery.

But gradually your childish terrors passed—you learned to adapt yourself—learned to bear your maturity proudly.

But those others—they wouldn't give up their infantile dreams as you gave up yours. Outwardly, they seemed to fall in line. Inwardly, they clung to their adolescent fantacies — their youthful sentimentality, idealism and peevishness.

Somewhere, sometime they'd find the perfect world of which they'd dreamed, the perfect job, the perfect mate, the perfect program. Then, at last, they'd be Conquering Heroes, Fairy Princesses!

So they wait—these grown-up babies—wait for baby dreams to come true. Flying in the meantime from reality . . . seeking refuge in tantrums, fantasies or play-games.

Like Peter Pan—remember? Weird, wistful little Peter Pan, who flitted about forever in his nightie and never lost his baby teeth!

These men and women who look like grown-ups but aren't—thousands and thousands of them — THEY, TOO, HAVE NEVER LOST THEIR BABY TEETH!

Habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those entrusted with the administration.—George Washington.

Public opinion has a natural flex and reflex.—Macaulay.

Earth's noblest possession—a woman perfected.—J. R. Lowell.

I hope that you have not been leading a double life, pretending to be wicked and being really good all the time.—Byron.

Old Days of the West

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

The hi-yippy-yea of a hard-riding cowboy echoes through Madison Square Garden, in New York, as the annual Rodeo turns on its battery of thrills. Buckers and sunfishers do their stuff, and the air is filled with young men suddenly evicted from equine spines and convoluting in eccentric circles, landing with a crash in the sawdust and tanbark.

Edwin C. Hill

Like the circus, still the most appealing show for young and old, the Rodeo maintains its romantic attraction.

This is so because it takes us back to the days when the West was in the making; when stout hearts carried indomitable bodies out of the crowded East and over the Mississippi to give us our Western empire.

RECALLS BUFFALO BILL

Somehow even the modern rodeo brings back to this writer the unforgettable thrills that William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," used to jam into his great Wild West Show. Old Madison Square Garden is gone.

But even in the new Garden, as the cowpunchers ride wildly around the arena with their bucking bronks and their six-gallon sombreros, piercing the air with their shrill cries, one regains the dramatic picture of Col. Cody riding into the arena on his great cream-color stallion.

THE REAL THING

I don't suppose that a more dramatic one-man tableau was ever presented on any stage of public entertainment than that of the old scout as he pulled his great horse up to its hind legs, lifted his white sombrero with an imperial gesture and bowed right and left as the spotlight played upon his long white hair and his silvery moustache and goatee.

That was a great outfit, Bill Cody's, back in the Gay Nineties and the early part of this century. The Colonel's right-hand man had been his friend for years Major John M. Burke.

It was Major Burke who invariably reminded us reporters that the annual assemblage of Indians and cowboys was not a Wild West show but a great educational entertainment, and he was right.

When Buffalo Bill rode down to dust with Yellow Hand, it was not a simulation of combat that we saw. It was the real thing.

I wonder how many of our readers remember Dr. Carver, and the equally famous sharpshooter, Annie Oakley. Then, too, there were Johnny Grant, Col. Hageman, Texas Jack and a dozen other unforgettable figures of that unforgettable educational entertainment.

The show always began with a wagon train making its way across the plains. The bright lights of the old Garden paled to a simulation of approaching evening.

Covered wagons and protecting horsemen circled and formed a barricade against possible Indian attack, which was an invariable feature of such pioneer scenarios.

The pioneers descended from their big Conestoga wagons. The live stock was unharnessed, haltered and led into the protected circle.

The pioneer women prepared their pots and pans for the evening meal.

Suddenly the scouts, stationed on a rise of ground just behind the encampment, signalled danger. Buffalo Bill, always a magnificent figure on his great horse, rode furiously toward the ridge from whence the scouts were sending their signals.

In an instant the camp was in an uproar of orderly confusion. The women folk were ordered into the covered wagons.

Then came the onrush of the redmen, led by Chief Irontail. Savagely whooping, they rode around and around the circle of defensive wagons, shooting blunted arrows. The settlers replied from behind the big Conestogas.

Many a redman bit the dust in those old encounters in the Garden. And presently, when it seemed that the encampment was doomed, would come the U. S. Cavalry, the Seventh—out of compliment to the famous old regiment for which Col. Cody used to scout in his young days.

And while the spectators cheered wildly, fairly shaking the rafters of the great auditorium, the Indians would flee in disorder, leaving their dead in the scented sawdust.

Pharmacy Goes Modern

By Howard Stephenson

Editor of American Druggist Magazine, Written for National Pharmacy Week, October 21-26.

A SOLDIER wounded by a bayonet "cured" the injury, up to two centuries ago, by rubbing a salve which he obtained from the king's apothecary, not on his body but on the bayonet.

Today over a million dollars' worth of vaccines and serums have been shipped into Africa from pharmaceutical laboratories of America and Europe, to safeguard soldiers from infection. Pharmacy, the science of preparing medicines, has made almost incredible advances.

Five autumn days, fifty years ago, would see apprentice boys from the drug stores scrambling over country hillsides on a herb-gathering expedition.

The druggist collected his own sassafras, ground up his cinnamon bark, made his own rose water, prepared skin emollient by boiling out the fat of lamb's wool.

Today the young man behind the prescription counter in the drug store is a college graduate, with a state certificate which was granted him only after strict examinations as to his scientific knowledge.

Even common drugs come to the consumer packaged and sterile, in air-tight containers, correctly labeled as to potency by the laboratory where they were processed.

No matter how modest or small the registered pharmacy in your neighborhood, it is regularly and rigidly inspected by state officials to make sure that its fittings conform to modern scientific standards.

The apothecary's art, bound up of old with mystery and superstition, has gone completely modern. It has none of the dusty shabby-genteel aspect of old legend.

The present trend is to make of the prescription department the heart of the store, with ware and apparatus accurate, immaculate and aseptic.

This same spirit is reflected in other departments, where everything from cosmetics to ice cream sodas may be vended, all under professional supervision.

To the consumer, this means simply better health protection in a variety of ways. Some day the public will demand of all retail stores that they be clean and well-equipped, adequately lighted and conveniently arranged for sanitary display of merchandise.

The pharmacy, which has never lost its influence as a community gathering place, is leading the parade toward modernization.

New View of Dieting

By Winifred Black

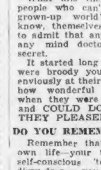
SO THEY are putting you on a diet, are they, old friend? Well, that's nice and scientific for you, and there's no doubt in the world it will do you a whole lot of good—maybe. Some people can diet and some can't.



Winifred Black

I know a woman who's grauited him only after strict examinations as to his scientific knowledge. Shehas a cup of tea and a whole lot of nothing for breakfnest; a salad and a cracker for luncheon, a cup of soup and a small half of a ripe peach for dinner. And she's the palest, thinnest, sickest, saddest, down-in-the-mouthest, crabbiest human being who ever lived.

What have the few years she's clinging to so desperately got to give her anyhow? She has lived her life, she has had her pleasant little feminine fling; she has seen the world and the world has seen her.

Why does she want to go stumbling, fainting and crawling along for a half dozen more years?

I know it's a terrible thing to say, but if I were in her place, I believe I'd have a party and have everything I like to eat and drink on the table and invite all the people I loved to come to the party.

Someone would sing a gay old song that I knew when I was young and lived for the very joy of living. We'd all sing together, and laugh and eat and drink; and if I did step along at the end of the evening, what of it?

I'd be out of the way, and no care and responsibility for anyone. And I'd die with a friendly and friendly laugh in my throat.

But if you're just going to get thinner and more depressed and depressing and less able to laugh at the world's ridiculous blunders —what's the use?

The clock for your destiny and mine is ticking away somewhere, and when it comes to the right hour we die and no will of yours or mine will keep it going.

That's my belief. It's very unscientific and very foolish, no doubt, but such as it is, there it is.

"Live while you're living and don't be a clam.

Was the simple remark of Omar Khyam."
